TREATY MAY STAND.

It is not believed in diplomatic circles that Great Britain will make any serious objections to the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The ined greatly by the Nicaraguan canal, more so than those of any other country except the United States. In view glorious whole-the Washington belle. of this fact, universally understood, diplomats of the various European goverments here have privately said that no amendments that the Senate might make would prevent its ratification by Great Britain, so Long as the construction of the canal can be counted upon as certain.

The amendments are generally regarded, even by Senator Morgan, who opposed them, as not materially altering the spirit of the proposed treaty. It assures a neutral canal open to the ships of all nations upon equal terms at a tonnage rate considerably less than that of the Suez canal. This advantage alone, it is believed, will lead to its acceptance by England after some correspondence and discussion.

In addition to this a powerful influence will be brought to bear by leading Canadian statesman in favor of the treaty, because the British possessions in America will be greatly benefited by the canal. It is known here that the Canadian representatives in Great Britain are in favor of the ratification of the treaty as it stands, because they believe that the canal will benefit Canada proportionately more even than the United States. The only direct means of communication coasts of Canada is through the Canacanal.

The amended treaty will be sent to England this week, with an explanation of the amendments made by the Senate. The usual course is then to await action on the part of Great Britain, which may either ask for explanations through her regular diplomatic channels or ratify it with out seeking any change.

Should change be insisted upon by Great Britain after they are agreed upon between the United States and Great Britain, the treaty will have to be ratified as changed by the Senate of the United States again before copies are finally exchanged and it becomes binding upon the two na-

Dog With Rables Causes Terror.

A mad dog scare has prevailed at Bodines, near Williamsport, during the past few days. A strange dog put in an appearance about a week ago and before leaving the town a score or more dogs had been bitten by the "tramp." All the dogs bitten acted queerly and attacked other canines. The half hundred dogs of the village soon showed signs of rabies. Nearly all the dogs were killed by the citizens. A little girl was bitten by one of the dogs. She is being treated to prevent hydrophobia. The killing of the dogs has not relieved the Bodinites of their trouble. for it has been discovered that a number of hogs and cows have been bitten.

Take Your Choice.

The Buddhists believe that happiness, Nirvana, consists in self effacement, oblivion. The young Buddhas began life by sitting unsupported in the air just after birth. Their mothers attained Nirvana immediately, and they the Euddhas, reached Nirvana in various queer ways.

One earnest Buddha, one of the earliest of the long line, carned the "Nibbuta" as follows:

A hawk was about to devour a small bird. Said the Buddha to the bird of

"I beseech thee, leave this little creature in peace. I will give thee its weight from my own flesh." Down from heaven came a pair of scales, and the transaction was accomplished. The small bird sat on one side of the scales, and the Buddha began putting slices of his body into the other side, while the bird of prey looked on with an evil eye. As the Buddha carved himself up the little bird seemed to get heavier and heavier. The beam of the scales did not move until the last particle of the saint's body was put in

The Buddhists' legends do not tell how the saint managed to carve up his last few fragments, but that is not important. Which do you think was happier, the Buddha who entered into Nirvana as the little bird flew away or the bird of prey that made a hearty meal of the saint's flesh and sailed off delighted with his bargain?-New York Journal.

Cobwebs and Cuts.

An old time remedy to stop blood flowing from a cut is to put cobwebs over it, but from recent discovery it appears a dangerous thing to do. Some time ago a woman fell and cut her head, and when her friends burried to her assistance they found the blood flowing from a deep gash. Cobwebs were applied, and the bleeding quickly stopped, but in a few days the woman was taken with lockjaw.

A scientist declared there were lockjaw germs in cobwebs, and that was the way the woman contracted the disease. He has made quite a study of the Washington girl does not enjoy the the subject and says that in a handful of cobwebs he found 61 different disease germs. That being true, it is very easy to see how one could get not only lockjaw, but many other dreadful disenses, as the cobweb is placed right on an open wound and the germs can enter the blood. Cobwebs form in dark. dirty places, and it is not to be wondered that they gather germs. - Exchange.
