There is a something, we cannot just tell what, that somehow, in some manner draws our thoughts and minds toward the homeland. It is quite natural for those who are out in the world, away from the scenes of their childhood associations to retain a warm attachment and manifest more than a mere pa sing interest in the place and people of their earlier days. We may wander far from our early home; years er is always the loser, and the whole system should be abolished.

The following quotations from other important Republican organs give some idea of the revolt Senator Hanna has stirred up by his attempt to put the ship subsidy bill through:

It has been made manifest during the session that the sentiment of the vast middle west and of a considerable proportion of all other parts of the country is unalterably opposed to the subsidy plan. Among those who are not actively opposed to it another very large proportion of the public is either apathetic or not fully informed as to the character and purpose of the measure. The active support of the bill comes from the interests to be benefited and from the handful of senators who have taken it upon themselves to endow those interests with a rich annuity from out the public treasury.

The senatorial contest over the measure is thus fairly a contest of public sentiment against private interests. and the fact that the latter are suffianything like equal terms is in itself unpleasantly suggestive of the extent to which private interests have gained influence in the senate.-Chicago Times-Herald. (Ind. Rep.).

The Union-Snyder-Mifflin judicial district is having a hot time. Judge McClure and Samuel H. Orwig, Esq., are registering candidates in Union county, and are making house to house canvasses, and are resorting to every known political means, commendable their turn comes to fill this important office, refrain from such belittling po litical methods.

Senator C. L. Magee, of Pittsburg, politician and philanthropist, died at his Harrisburg home Friday evening of last week. Senator Magee was one of the representative Republicans of Western Pennsylvania, and had much Spring. to do with the shaping of legislation at the state capitol.

Mayor Ashbridge, of Philadelphia, has a notion that the Pennsylvania Republicans want him for governor, and accordingly had the Working Men's Protective Tariff League start a movement in that direction.

The failure of the Delaware legislature to elect United States Senators brings the subject of electing U. S. Senators by popular vote anew before the people. Such change in the con-Republican.
