with the outside world as rapidly as possible, and that in a short time connections will be made with the Keystone company which is wiring Philadelphia at present in opposition to the Bell company. The first connection of importance to be accomplished is that of joining the local line with those entering Williamsport, which will connect Centre Hall with all points from here to Lewisburg, via Lock Haven and Williamsport. This, of course, is only to serve as an accommodation until the line from Coburn to Lewisburg can be constructed.

Monster Eggs.

The Reporter's Spring Mills correspondent writes thus: Eggs in this locality seem to border on the marvelous and sound like fish stories. Nevertheless, 'Squire Hering had two chicken eggs each weighing four and one-half ounces strong-certainly very much egg. H. B. Miller so far is the neplus ultra in the egg line; he had an egg which measured eight and threefourths by seven and one-fourth inches and weighed fully eight ounces-a monster for the fruit of an ordinary hen. The most remarkable feature concerning it is that it contained another perfect egg. When first discovered one end of the egg had been fractured and the greater part of the contents had oozed out, and with this material the second egg had no doubt one of nature's wild freaks.
