Four Trainmen Lose Their Lives Near Lynchburg, Va.

TRAIN WAS TRAPPED BY EARTH.

Narrow Escape of a Passenger Train From Near Lynchburg - Four or Five Were Killed, and It Is Thought That Others May Be Buried Under the Debris.

Lynchburg, Va. (Special.) - A passenger train on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad struck a landslide about five Neb., on the charge of maintaining miles west of this city, and it is probable gambling devices.

Peter Mitchell, colored, who was acthat the death list may reach 25.

The railroad officials here admit the loss of three lives, but one of the surviv- lynched ors of the wreck says that not less than ten persons were buried beneath an enormous landslide, while late information obtained by telephone from the scene of the disaster was to the effect that probably 25 persons had lost their lives.

The accident occurred about one mile west of Reusens, a station four or five miles west of Lynchburg. The train was a westbound passenger, which left here two hours late. The track at this point is between a high bluff and the river, and the latter is higher than it has been for many years. CURRAN.

At 11 o'clock a man claiming to have been a passenger on the train walked into the city, stating that he was a Chesapeake and Ohio employe on his way to the company hospital, at Clifton Forge, for treatment. He tells the following story

At about 8 o'clock the train ran into the slide, derailing the engine. Conductor Whittaker called on the passengers to help him move the two coaches back from the engine so that the latter might be free to attempt to get back on the The passenger coach was then pushed back about 60 feet, and- while all hands were engaged in pushing back the baggage car a tremendous slide of earth came from the bluff, turning over ehe engine and carrying with it the engineer, fireman, conductor and some of the pasengers.

When asked how many were buried, he said he thought there were about 10. The railroad officials claim that Engineer Fisher attempted to back the train, which was composed of a baggage car and pasenger coach, and in doing so the engine turned over, burying the engineer and fireman under it on the edge of the river. The conductor, young Whittaker, of Richmond, in going out to see what was the matter, was swept into the river, and as he went down he was heard to cry out, "Say good-by to my wife and children."
