A POLITICAL STRADDLER.

President Roosevelt, in giving his decision in the Schley case, played the part of a political straddler. It is his first real attempt at straddling, but his exhibition of skill in the art is evidence that he is equal to the occasion when occasion demands straddling.

The idea of a president saying that the naval battle at Santiago was a captain's fight, and not under Schley's command is disgusting. It is especially distasteful when Schley is condemned for error, imaginary or otherwise, but not credited with the successes. How can Schley be responsible for the errors, if any there were, and not be entitled to the successes?

President Roosevelt's decision in this case is much like the old woman who always made it a habit to say just the proper thing at the proper time, especially when wanting to dispose of some article. One day a drover happened to her place to purchase a fine Jersey cow. Among other questions asked the woman was whether the animal was pregnant. Now the old lady was vexed to know whether to say yes or no—which answer would please. She hesitated a moment and answered: "partly."

There is just as little sense in Roosevelt's answer in the Schley case as there was in the woman's "partly."

President Roosevelt's answer is that of a political straddler, who knows the wishes of the people and the power of the political bosses, and is endeavoring to please both, but pleasing neither.

To Write of Birds as People.

Neltje Blanchan, whose delightful nature-books have been so successful, will begin in the March issue of The Ladies' Home Journal a series of articles dealing with the "personal" side of the birds. This clever woman has made a close study of bird-life, and her discoveries and observations are most interesting. She has found among the feathered scoundrels many striking resemblances to men and women, and in this series of articles she will tell of these. In some instances the almost human actions of birds, as she tells of them, are astonishing.

THE SINFUL BROTHER.

He Was a Good Man, but Didn't Hold Family Prayers.

It was at a certain church meeting, and the good bishop was calling for reports. He had a rather stern, sharp manner which sometimes jarred a little on the nerves of the more timid. By and by he came to Brother B., a lay delegate.

"Brother B., what is the spiritual condition of your church?" demanded the bishop briskly.

"I consider it good," said the brother.

"What makes you think it is good?" went on the bishop.

"Well, the people are religious. That's what makes me think so."

"Do you call religious? Do they have family prayer?"

"Some of them do, and some do not."

"Do you mean to say that a man may be a Christian and not hold family prayer?"

"Yes, sir; I think so."

"Do you hold family prayer?"

"Yes, sir," returned the brother quietly.

"And yet you think a man may be a Christian and not hold family prayer?"

"I have a brother who is a better man than I am who does not hold family prayer."

"What makes you think he is a better man than you are?"

"Everybody says so, and I know he is."

"Why does not your brother, if he is such a good man, hold family prayer?" thundered the bishop.

"He has no family," meekly answered the brother.—Harper's.

The Basking Shark.

The ferocity of sharks is not necessarily in proportion to their size. For example, there is the great basking shark, so called because of its habit of lying motionless at the surface of the water. It often attains a length of nearly forty feet, but its teeth are small comparatively, and it probably never attacks man, depending upon small fishes and crustacea for its diet. Another name for this species is "sail fish," because of its great back fin, which shows out of the water like a sail when it is basking.

Although sluggish ordinarily and easily harpooned, it exhibits great activity and enormous strength when struck, diving immediately to the bottom and requiring a great length of rope to hold it. These basking sharks are caught and their oil obtained is used to adulterate cod liver oil.

A Revival.

Revivalism in Jamaica has its tragedies and its comedies, but under no circumstances its advantages. The excitability of the black man is animal; it leads him backward toward the jungle, toward Obolism. The noisy revivalistic meetings is a more serious scandal than a tea party. A doctor told us that not long since he was called in to a meeting, where he saw a woman lying on the ground, while her coreligionists danced a ketch dance in frantic circle around her, proclaiming her to be "in de spirit." He found she was dead from a fit caused by excitement. But the consequences of these "pious orgies" may be merely inconvenient, as in the case of the black lady who when "in de spirit" climbed upon her neighbor's roof and sat there for two days. The neighbor found this inconvenient.

The Kid Glove Kid.

The average kid glove, according to those who should know, is not made of kid at all, but of goat or lamb skin. The kids from which the real kid glove is made are nurtured and cared for almost as carefully as are race horses. Most of them are reared in a mountainous district of France. The kids are nourished on milk alone and are never allowed to eat grass, as that would coarsen the skin. The kid is kept in a pen, where he can receive no scratch or bruise. They are then kept, as it were, in cotton wool until the age when the skin is of most value. They are then carefully killed and the skin dressed with the utmost skill. Sheep, deer and coits are also pressed into service for so called kid and dogskin gloves.

The Potato.

Humboldt says that at the time of the discovery of America the potato was cultivated in all the temperate parts of South America from Chile up to the coast. The Spaniards first noticed it in Peru. The variety of potato cultivated in Europe and North America grows wild in Chile. Different species of the plant are found growing wild in most parts of South America, and it is claimed by many botanists, in Mexico and Arizona.

Every Animal is Fond of Bananas.

The leaves of the banana, often six feet long and two feet wide, are tender, and the strong winds of the tropics soon tear them in strips, thereby adding to their grace and beauty. The banana is a fruit that beaunt and bird, as well as man, are fond of, and the owner, when he lives in a sparsely settled country, must protect his plantation by a fence of some thorny plant.

The Main Point.

Mrs. Gatterson—You will come to dinner anyway, Mr. Tutter, will you not, though I am afraid there will not be many interesting people present?

Tutter (galantly)—What difference does that make? One is always sure of a good square meal at your house.—Harlem Life.

A Dangerous Tree.

Brown—Are you interested in genealogy? Ever looked up your ancestral tree?

Black—Never did. Fact is I'd be afraid there might be a man hanging from one of its branches.—Boston Transcript.

Educational Conference.

least in that neighborhood; he was required to be a fair reader, a good penman and to be able to cipher through the "rule of three."

A teacher who could solve all the problems, sums they were called, was looked upon as a mathematical prodigy. He was required to be a good penman, as pens were made from goose quills. My first teacher was the venerable John Meyer, who lives about two miles east of Penn Hall. He was a kind man, whom we all loved. Steel pens were being introduced into our schools about this time, but nevertheless, Mr. Meyer was always ready to make a goose quill pen for us whenever we asked him. It was also demanded of the teacher that he should have good muscle, so as to be able to wield a birch about four feet long and as thick as your finger. The teacher was not expected to know much beyond the branches he was required to teach. How different are the demands made upon the teacher of the present day. A director, since gone to his rest, once said to a brother teacher who is present, "every teacher should be a walking dictionary." The teacher of today is expected to know a great deal more than is found in the books he is required to teach from. Besides the public school curriculum, the teacher is expected to know something of chemistry, philosophy, geometry, latin, and in truth the elements of all the sciences. He should be a reader of the daily newspaper; he need not spend much time with the murder and robbery stories, but nearly every day the paper has some fact of history, of science or nature, out of which an object lesson can be made for the class. He is expected to be studying out newer and better methods of instruction. Some years ago I read this statement in an educational paper published in western Pennsylvania: "The methods you used in your school last year are not good enough for this year, and the methods you are now using will not be good enough for next year."

Notes.

The chairman, Prof. A. T. Igen, presided with considerable dignity, and filled unoccupied time with remarks on whatever subject was being discussed.

The educational sentiment in Penna. Valley is on the rise.

Something That Will Do You Good.
We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their homes as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Messenger. For sale by J. F. Smith, H. E. Roseman, J. B. Fisher's Sons.
