The Soldiers and the Strike.

If what the leaders of the miners' strike allege be true—that they are opposed to intimidation and law-breaking upon the part of strikers, and that there is no desire upon the part of union miners to return to work except upon the grant of the concessions they originally asked for—the presence of the soldiers in the mining region who assist in the repression of disorder and the control of alien rioters is a distinct advantage.

On the contrary, if the allegations of the operators be true—that they could resume mining but for fear of riot, loss of life and property and the intimidation of miners who otherwise would return to work—the presence of the soldiers is altogether desirable.

In the interest of the strikers, the mine owners and the public at large the soldiers should be kept where they are until the strike is over.

But there should be either a resumption of work or a resumption of negotiations. Evidently the first move should be made by the coal companies.

The excessive wet weather is telling on the fruit, especially on the plums growing in great clusters in the fruit orchard of W. B. Mingle, Esq., on Hoffer street. The plums growing there are of an exceedingly fine quality, and almost come to perfection, when before it can be realized, they burst open and rot. Many bushels of this fruit disappeared by the way of rot.

At the time mentioned Mr. Moyer and family were driving a livery rig across the mountain to attend the great Pleasant Gap band festival, and when Bilger's was reached one of the shaft bolts came loose or broke, leaving the shaft drop on the horse's heels.

The animal became frightened and started to run at full speed and no amount of pulling back by the driver was able to check her. The animal continued to run until the toll gate was reached where, by the aid of several men, the animal was run against the fence and quickly grasped by the bit. It was a frightful ride, and every minute the lives of the occupants of the buggy were in great danger but all terminated well.
