

ERRONEOUS BELIEFS

COMMON NOTIONS ABOUT ANIMALS THAT ARE LOW OF IGNORANCE.

Some Superstitions About Toads and Snakes Explained A Way—Mammals, Birds and Their Eggs—Lambs and Sheep and Their Tails.

It is commonly believed that toads cause warts. This is based upon the following combination of facts: Toads are the only common animals that are naturally covered with wartlike lumps. They eject a clear liquid. This is supposed to do something. Warts appear mysteriously, and no one is able to explain the causes of their coming and going. It is erroneously inferred that they are produced by this wart bearing, nocturnal creature with peculiar habits, upon the basis of the doctrine that "like produces like." The common belief that tadpoles shed their tails has for its origin the facts that while living in water each possesses a swimming tail, but when it metamorphoses into a frog or a toad it becomes tailless. In fact, the tail does not drop off, but it is absorbed and disappears in the body, just as a swelling from a bump on the head disappears. How often do we hear that frogs and toads have fallen with rain, and almost every July we may read accounts of such phenomena. These may have for their basis the fact that during the month of July toads change from the tadpole stage and aquatic habitat to the adult form and terrestrial habitat and then migrate landward in great numbers. They are active only at night or during hot weather, effectually concealing themselves in the most common places during the daytime. However, when a rain falls at such a time they appear by thousands, as if by magic, and give the impression of having fallen with rain.

There are doubtless more superstitions concerning snakes than any other creatures. This arises in part from the traditions of the form of the original tempter and in part from the fact that but very few persons are willing to calmly observe serpents for themselves and learn the truth directly. We have met persons who believe that all snakes are venomous. This doubtless comes from the old Roman rule, "Ab uno disce omnes." How prevalent is the belief that horse hairs turn to snakes! There is no other foundation for this error than the resemblance of the so called hairsnake (gordius) to a common horsehair. Snakes are often supposed to charm birds, but the fact is that the feathered songsters are paralyzed by fright when they suddenly see the reptiles at close proximity.

The common erroneous belief that snakes sting or bite by means of their tongues may come from the Scriptural quotation, "It stingsh like an adder." The supposition that snakes bite themselves and die is doubtless based upon the actions of certain species, like the bog nosed adder, which when teased will act as though dead and then sometimes find protection. It is very commonly thought that snakes "live" or are active until sundown. This arises from the prolonged activity of the tail, due to the reflex action of the caudal nerve centers, which may continue for a longer or shorter period owing to temperature and other conditions. Many persons believe that there is a glass snake or joint snake, which may be broken to fragments when struck, but can rejoin itself and live. This may come from the fact that a certain lizard (Ophisaurus ventralis) readily loses its tail, and while the body escapes the caudal member wiggles and attracts the attention of the pursuer.

The erroneous idea that turtles breathe under water, as do fishes, is derived from the observations of their having remained submerged for some hours. But this is made possible by their lung capacity, their limited need of oxygen compared with that of warm blooded animals and their ability to store oxygen in their tissues and use it as needed. Both species of American cuckoos (genus coccyzus) build nests, contrary to the popular belief. The error comes from the fact that the European cuckoo (cuculus) builds no nests, but is parasitic, laying its eggs in the nests of other birds, as does our cowbird (molothrus). The old idea that "a sight of the oriole cures jaundice" doubtless is connected with the yellow color of the bird and the homeopathic doctrine "Similia similibus curantur" (like cures like).

Most persons believe that owls, cats and other nocturnal animals can see in absolute darkness. This error arises from the fact that in these animals the pupil of the eye is very large or dilatable, and in subdued or very feeble light they can see much better than can man. One can readily demonstrate the fallacy of the supposition by taking into a owl or other nocturnal animal into a perfectly dark room, as we have done, and touching it with the hand. It does not move, even though it be an untaught animal. Cats and other nocturnal animals are erroneously thought to emit light from their eyes because when looking toward the light the crystalline lens of the eye produces a glaring reflection. The idea that swans sing when dying and moles open their eyes at the time of death are handed down from the writings of Pliny and represent ignorance of the facts of zoology.

We were once seriously asked by a teacher, "At what age do the little lambs' tails drop off?" He had accurately observed that the tails of the lambs are long, while those of the old sheep are short, and he had obtained a false idea, which is, however, prevalent. Of course he was shocked to learn that sheep raisers amputate the tails to prevent the soiling of the wool.—Forest and Stream.

more for the day, yet we kept on through mud, fording small streams, and halted not till night set in, when we bivouacked near Fort Washington, pretty well played out, though we marched only about fifteen miles.

In consequence of the deep mud it was impossible for our wagon train to keep up, and unwise to move the regiment faster than the wagon train could go. We had nothing to eat for twenty-four hours, during which time we marched fifteen miles; we named this bivouac Camp Starvation. The night was very cold, the ground frozen hard and more canteens burst.

Toward evening, as we were floundering along in the mud and very tired, we passed the home of a planter who had gathered his slaves in the yard, with his family, to keep them from running away with us. They were leaning against the fence of the yard, watching to wade in the mud.

Captain Dolan, of Co. F, who was carrying his "luggage," a very large "grip," himself, and about tired out, walked up to them and offered inducements to a stout young "con." to run off, come with him, be free and be his servant for pay. Mr. Coon hesitated, the family objected.

Finally the Coon jumped the fence, took the captain's big grip, together with his military cloak and overcoat, worth sixty dollars, the entire outfit worth about two hundred dollars, and bravely joined us in our march in the mud, but when night had set in, and we had bivouacked for the night, the captain began to look around for his nigger; he felt the need of overcoat and blankets, for it was very cold, but neither nigger, nor the captain's outfit was ever seen again.

We waited in "Camp Starvation," Dec. 13th, 1862, till two p. m., when our supply train came up, and we were supplied with crackers, pork and coffee, which we relished wonderfully, after a fast of thirty-three hours, twelve of which on fatiguing march.

At four p. m. we again took the road, and moved as rapidly as the muddy condition of the road permitted, and continued without a halt till dark and bivouacked for the night six miles from Camp Starvation; we had no tents.

Sunday morning, Dec. 14th, we were roused at two o'clock and by three a. m. we had finished our breakfast of crackers, coffee and pork, and were on the road floundering along in the mud as fast as it was possible, without halt till one p. m. when the men were completely tired out and we camped in beautiful oak timber; here we built fires and were more comfortable; made eighteen miles that day.

Monday, Dec. 15th was a day of very heavy and continuous rain; brooks were converted into rushing torrents and ordinary ravines were deep, and swift running streams. Notwithstanding the rain, water and mud, our column moved at nine a. m., made a march of five miles, wading streams knee deep and reached Liverpool Point on the Potomac river about noon, soaked to the hide, uniforms plastered with mud, our feet "quashing" in the mud and water in our shoes as we walked.

We spent the afternoon and night in bivouac in this place; during the afternoon the rain was light, but we were without tents and wood was very scarce, so we had a cheerless night in wet clothes, lying on the wet ground.

Monday, 16th, came in dark and gloomy and during the forenoon the rain was something wonderful, but about noon it began to clear and from then on became rapidly colder and freezing weather set in.

In the forenoon two large steam transports reached the "point" and took the regiment, wagon train and all on board, and carried us down and across the now far-famed Potomac river, and landed us on Virginia soil, at Aquia Creek Landing, where we spent the balance of the day. This was, for us a place of unusual interest. It was one of the Confederate strongholds during the first year of the war, when they had completely blockaded the navigation of the Potomac and cut all communication with Washington by water.

For hours we examined with great interest these abandoned and dismantled Confederate forts; they occupied very high bluffs and no pains or labor had been spared in making them strong, impregnable.

Every bill of any importance was occupied by a fort or battery. The main fort, opposite the landing, occupied a very high bluff, a very strong position naturally, and commanded all approaches by land or water. Standing out prominently in a bend of the river it commanded an unobstructed view for many miles up and down the great river. A vessel in passing this fort would have been in constant range of it for ten miles.

When the confederates abandoned this point they dismantled all the forts, burned over five hundred railroad cars with the landing, and destroyed the railroad.

The scorching of a pin may cause the loss of a limb or even death when blood poisoning results from the injury. All danger of this may be avoided, however, by promptly applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It is an antiseptic and quick healing liniment for cuts, bruises and burns. For sale by C. W. QUAY SPEAKS THROUGH THE NORTH AMERICAN.

Tells Why the Territory of New Mexico Should be Admitted to Statehood.

Senator Quay is the champion of the Statehood bill now before the United States Senate. He is an enthusiastic sponsor for the people of the Territory of New Mexico, which he describes in an extended article written by him for the Magazine Section of next Sunday's North American. For more than fifty years New Mexico has knocked at the door and demanded recognition as a right inherent in the treaty which annexed the territory to the Union. Statehood has been demanded of twenty-nine Congresses, and at least once a bill passed both houses and failed only because of the neglect or sinister act of the then Speaker of the House or the Representatives, who permitted the bill to remain upon his desk.

In his effort to make New Mexico a State, and, incidentally, make his friend and former lieutenant, W. H. Andrews, a United States Senator, Mr. Quay has braved the indignant protest of the united press of the country, and dared to threaten to encompass the defeat of the Panama Canal bill.

Senator Quay and Andrews, who is now a Territorial Senator in the land of his adoption, declare that the Republican party, through the last two National Conventions, has demanded Statehood for New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma, and also that the Democratic National party has endorsed admission. They protest that the territory is peaceable, prosperous, law abiding, enterprising, with valuable industries well developed, a vast agricultural district fully improved and vast mineral deposits which are annually adding to the wealth of the nation.

Senator Quay claims that the railroads of the State are well built and reach into every quarter, over 3000 miles now being in operation and many hundreds of miles more under contract. It will be the fourth State in the Union in point of size, with 78,000,000 acres within the jurisdiction, of which over 55,000,000 acres are yet subject to pre-emption; an area as large as Pennsylvania and Massachusetts combined. Last year the wool crop reached 25,000,000 pounds, the coal output 1,500,000 tons and minerals of all kinds netted the territory $10,000,000.

In next Sunday's Magazine Section of the North American Senator Quay tells in a statement especially prepared for The North American the reasons for his advocacy of the admission of New Mexico into Statehood. Territorial Senator W. H. Andrews, formerly Senator from Crawford county, Pa., now a heavy owner of mines and president of railroads in the new country, also gives to the readers of The North American an inside view of the resources of the Territory.

And there's something else in the Sunday North American.

Boys, how would you like the best handcar wagon on the market?

How would a handsome piano, three feet high, suit you girls?

These and more than a dozen top prizes are offered by the Philadelphia Sunday North American. You can win them by answering one simple question.

Look for pictures and description of them on the Children's Page in next Sunday's North American.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Elmhurst, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and one dollar bottles are sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Elmhurst, N. Y., on every bottle.
