INDIAN TRADING.

The Way to Beat the Red Man Down In His Prices.

"Few white men know how to trade with an Indian," remarked a Denver man who has made a study of Indians for ten years past. "I once met an In-Can with a magnificent mountain lion skin. He was willing to part with the ornament, but his price was too high. I offered him $12.50, but he indignantly refused. Later, on the same day, after I had learned to trade with an Indian, I bought the skin for $1.50.

"The secret of trading with the In-dian is to appear indifferent. The most successful trader is the one who goes with a supply of the same article he is most desirous of buying. The Indian sees that the stranger has had experience, and megotistions are carried on upon a strictly business basis. An Indian refused $10 for a bow and arrow. It was bought for $1 by a man who carried several bows and arrows in his hand. This wily individual leased the supply from a store in order to impress his copper colored friends, and he succeeded.

Cold Feet. Cold feet are a sign of disordered circulation. Continual warming with artificial heat is but temporizing with the evil, and the difficulty should be overcome by proper dressing when that is in fault and by foot and ankle exercises. The latter can be taken at frequent intervals during the day, and they will assist in stimulating the circulation of the blood. Point the toes down to the extreme limit till you feel the muscles strain over the ankles and work the feet up and down eight or ten times; then devitalize them and shake them from the ankle, as one does the hand with a loose wrist. Sufferers from cold feet in bed can quickly warm them by this exercise, and it will bring relief and comfort during a long ride.

GRANGE PRINCIPLES.

Dignity of Labor, Fair Dealing and Good Citizenship.

We have nowhere seen a better presentation of the principles and purposes of the grange than the following in the They Were Treated Long After Com-American Agriculturist by Mr. J. A.

The character of the grange membership and their faith in the Order are such as give permanence to the organization. The effect of united grange effort is seen and felt in the legislature and other benefits secured in the interest of the farmer, along all lines of work. The dairyman, along all lines of work. The dairyman, the fruit grower, the stock breeder and the poultryman have all been benefited through the efforts of the grange. A greater degree of intelligence is manifest among the farmers as a result of grange meetings and their outgrowth, the farmers' institutes of today. Extortion among dealers has been checked, and a cash basis for doing business is encouraged, with beneficial results. with beneficial results.

The grange organization stands entirely for good. The principles are dignity of labor, honest dealing, justice to all, courage, bor, honest dealing, justice to all, courage, temperance, thoroughness, peaceful citizenship, charity and unspotted character. Can there be nobler principles than these? The grange encourages advanced education and seeks to elevate not only its membership, but the community in which it exists to a higher plane of culture, refinement and social standing. Social scandals are seldom found within its ranks. Its teachings are of the purest and highest character, like that of family refinement and intellectuality. If the grange comes short of this, then the principles and precepts of the Order are not faithfully observed.

The benefits of a good, active working grange are evidenced by an increased in-terest in the farm and home, a greater de-gree of social culture and enjoyment, an advance along the lines of higher education and an independence and thrift which should be the inheritance of every farmer. These facts appeal to all persons interested in agriculture, in all its varied departments, to unite with the grange and assist in advancing its objects as well as to share its benefits to share its benefits.

THE GRANGE AT WORK.

Petitions That Filled Barrels When the Anti-o Bill Was Up.

In the year 1800, when the oleo ques tion was being agitated, the grange thought it about time that we as an organization began to do something to protect our interests; therefore we passed some resolutions that we would take up what is known as the Grout bill and would use the forces of organization on it to see what could be brought about. Resolutions were drawn and presented to the subordinate granges, and it was the greatest surprise the Order ever had to know that inside of six weeks from the time of the presentation of these resolutions the replies came into the legislative office in Washington in such numbers that they actually filled barrels. Nothing from their constituencies and ever caused such a revelation to the minds of the members of congress as this did, and what has been the result? The result was that we made a determined fight from that time on and won. We did it through the grange, the recognized farmers' organization. The dairymen's associations are today interested, the horticultural. societies, the department of agriculture | was and the consequent destruction of at Washington and in our own state and in almost every state are working one of the most influential organizations in the country today. - E. B. Norrls, Master New York State Grange.

FOUR MISTORIC PAINTINGS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

pletion and When They Already Showed Signs of Dissolution - An Artist's Curious Blunder,

It is a curious fact that the same combination of chemicals which preserved in a perfect state for over 500 years the remains and shrouds of King Edward I. of England have also been used to preserve four of the great historical paintings perpetuating scenes in the foundation and establishment of this government.

These four paintings occupy perhaps the most conspicuous place for observation in the nation. They are the work of Colonel John Trumbull and hang on the eastern wall of the rotunda of the capitol.

The paintings were put in place in 1824 under the supervision of the artist himself, but not without much hesitation and objections on his part because of the dampness of the walls and air in the rotunda at that time. The fears of the artist were proved to be well founded, for four years later the changes on the surface of the paintings became so apparent that congress passed a resolution authorizing their removal from the walls of the rotunda by Colonel Trumbull for inspection and remedy if possible. It was at this point that Colonel Trumbull's knowledge of the preservative chemical compound was drawn on.

In a letter to congress, dated Dec. 9, 1828, Colonel Trumbull explains in detail his treatment of the paintings at that time, and an inspection now of these four pictures shows that they are in a perfect state of preservation both as to brightness of color and condition of canvas.

In the letter referred to Colonel Trumbull says: "All of the paintings were taken down, removed from their frames, taken off from the panels over which they were strained, removed to a dry, warm room and there separatey and carefully examined. The material which forms the basis of the paintings is a linen cloth whose strength and texture are very similar to those in the topgallant sails of a ship of war. The substances employed in forming a proper surface for the artist, together with the colors, oils, etc., form a sufficient protection for the face of the canvas, but the back remains bare and exposed to the deleterious effects of damp air. The effect of this is first seen in the form of mildew. It was this which I dreaded, and the examination showed that mildew was already commenced and to an extent which rendered it manifest that the continuance of the same exposure for a few years longer would have accomplished the complete decomposition or rotting of the canthe paintings."

Colonel Trumbull then explained how hand in hand with the grange. It is be first thoroughly dried the canvases and prepared them for the preservative. On this point he continues: "I had learned that a few years ago some of the eminent chemists of France had examined with great care some of the ancient mummies of Egypt with a view to ascertaining the nature of the substance employed by the embalmers which the lapse of so many ages had would use the grange for their own proved to possess the power of protecting from decay a substance otherwise so perishable as the human body. This examination had proved that, after the application of liquid asphaltum to the cavities of the head and body, the whole had been wrapped carefully in many envelopes or bandages of linen prepared with wax. The committee of chemists decided further, after a careful examination and analysis of the hieroglyphic palutings with which the casings, etc., are covered, that the colprovided which will enable farmers to ors employed and still retaining their vivid brightness had also been prestance

"I also know that toward the close of the last century the Antiquarian Society of England had been permitted to-open and examine the stone coffin At the last session of the Illinois | deposited in one of the vaults of Westminster abbey and said to contain the body of King Edward 1., who died in July, 1307. On removing the stone were found splendid robes of silk enriched with various ornaments covering the body, which was found to be entire and to have been wrapped carefully in all its parts, even to each separate finger, in bandages of fine linen which had been dipped in melted wax, and not only was the body not decomposed, but the various parts of the dress, such as a scarlet satin mantle was placed over the face, were in perfect preservation, even in their colors." Colonel Trumbull then states that, with this knowledge, he melted common beeswax and mixed with an equal. quantity of oil of turpentine, which mixture was applied hot with brushes erward rubbed in with hot irons until the cloth was perfectly saturated. The niches in the walls were backed with ordered placed in the entrances to the rotunda by Colonel Trumbull. Since that treatment these paintings have had nothing done to them, and from present appaarances they need noth-

Another peculiarity in one of these pictures is pointed out to persons being shown the capitol under the care of a guide, and that is in the scene of Washington resigning his commission. The two daughters of Charles Carroll, who stand embracing each other, are given five hands .- Washington Star.

It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to HIGH GRADE . . . try the remedy. The result was won-derful.
