OWLS IN WINTER.

Where They Hide and How They Manage to Get Food.

Owls are much commoner in winter than one is led to believe by the occasional specimens which are seen abroad in the daytime. If we searched the hollow trees systematically any morning, we should probably discover several screech owls and perhaps some of the larger species. We might be surprised to find some of the screech owls red and others gray, and, like the early ornithologists, we might conclude that the difference in color was due to difference in age or sex. It is now known that there are two distinct color phases of this species not dependent on either age or sex, though just what they are dependent on is not yet known. When taken from their retreats in winter, these birds frequently feign death, shutting their eyes and lying perfectly still in the hand. By and by, when they find that their little ruse does not succeed, they will snap their ill. bills and bite and scratch in a solemn but very effective manner. How they nranage to get enough to' eat on the dark, cold nights is a mystery to those unacquainted with the woods; but, as a matter of fact, there is more prey abroad on winter nights than is generally supposed. Wild mise are very nutheir footprints on the newly fallen snow, and owls are most expert mouse catchers. Their hearing is so acute that not a squeak escapes them, and they themselves are so soft on the wing that they do not alarm the game .- Woman's Home Companion. He Won His Bet.

The infant had been put to bed against his will, and, having got there, showed no inclination to go to sleep. He called his mother in to kiss her good night once more, to give him a glass of water, to put another cover on the bed, to tell her something very important, to ask her how to spell North Mrs. James Longwell is home circu- Carolina and to explain why he happened to be her little boy instead of

"No, I'm not coming. Nothing will induce me to come to you again." "I'll bet I can make you come," boasted the youngster. "I'll bet you can't," replied the exasperated parent.

There was a pause, and then the small voice, raised to its utmost, exclaimed, "The devil and all his works!"

Expending the County's Money.

The officious official should be curbed by Judge Love. This character of official is becoming an expensive ornament to Centre county. The officious official is found in many localities, and may be discovered in other personages than the constables. The various fish and game laws are affording business for this class of officials, and the justices who have gained reputations for turning cases over to court on the slimmest pretext are always alert-if not in cahoot-to be the judge in the matter.

Regardless of the result, arrests make a multiplicity of costs, which are always paid either by the defendant or the county. Call a halt on the officious office :.
