

HARD TO BEAR.

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Ky., living on East Main street, in that city, says:

"With my nightly rest broken, owing to irregularities of the kidneys, suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions, life was anything but pleasant for me. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition, and for the reason that nothing seemed to give me even temporary relief I became about discouraged. One day I noticed in the newspapers the case of a man who was afflicted as I was and was cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. His words of praise for this remedy were so sincere that on the strength of his statement I went to the Hugh Murray Drug Co.'s store and got a box. I found that the medicine was exactly as powerful a kidney remedy as represented. I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney Pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine, which cured Mr. Walls, will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A Good Alibi.

"You say," said the State's attorney, "that on the night of the 13th of September, the time when this crime was committed, you were out riding in the town of Oakville?"

"Yes, sir," said the prisoner, who was trying to set up an alibi.

"Have you any witnesses to prove that you were out riding?"

"Well, I don't know their names, but there must have been ten or twelve gentlemen carrying the rail, while there were a dozen or more walking behind, carrying the tar and feathers."

The Framing of It.

"I see there's talk of some members of the legislature framing a new treaty bill," remarked the inquisitive youth.

"Yes," replied his father.

"How is a treaty bill framed, anyway?"

"In guilt, usually."

The Early Home.

By Lily Braun.

IN pre-historic time when man had won fire from the lightning but had not yet learned how to make it himself, he established for the first time the household hearth, around which the family group gathered.

Man brought to her the wild beasts he had killed. She prepared them, made warm clothing and coverings out of the skin, and even learned to make tents which could be stretched over the sleeping places.

Then came the time when man learned to strike fire from flint; this was about the same time that he began to fight not only with the wild beast but with his own kind as well.

And how the realm of the hearthstone grew! Not only were the meals prepared there, but soap and candles were made, drinks were brewed and grains roasted.

With the coming of the machine began the real distress of the poorer homes. Their rooms became the workshop as well as the home, where the whole family, men and women, young and old, little and big, had to work for a bare living.

Then when the factories went up and the cities grew, the hearthstone of the country, too, for spinning and weaving and many of the other occupations went into. Nothing was left except the kitchen work.

The early home has disappeared, but who would call it back?

Acquaintance With Grief.

By Margaret Deland.

SHE has her husband and children; and they are well, and they are good, and they are contented; and yet, she was actually unhappy because—her dressmaker disappointed her!

Shame! says the poor creature whose sense of proportion has been born in some bitter hour of fear or bereavement or wrong-doing.

And it is a shame—a shame for people who have in their lives the consciousness of Love, and Character, and Courage, to fall into the wasteful folly of unhappiness about the unimportant.

The Art of Letting Go. It is just as important to learn, to let go as to hold on. Anything that cannot help us to get on and up in the world, anything that is a drag, a stumbling block or a hindrance, should be expunged from our memory.

The Art of Letting Go.

By the Editor of Success.

WE held to a great many things last year which we should have let go—shaken off entirely. In the first place we should expel from our minds completely the things which cannot be helped—our past misfortunes, the trivial occurrences which have mortified and humiliated us.

It is just as important to learn, to let go as to hold on. Anything that cannot help us to get on and up in the world, anything that is a drag, a stumbling block or a hindrance, should be expunged from our memory.

One of the first lessons in life is to learn to be absolute master of one's own mind, to clear it of its enemies and to keep it clear. A well-trained mind will never harbor thoughts inimical to success or happiness.

Then why not choose the noblest and best? One of the first lessons in life is to learn to be absolute master of one's own mind, to clear it of its enemies and to keep it clear.

Rockefeller's Money.

By the Editor of Harper's Weekly.

THERE are occasional signs of anxiety for fear that Mr. John D. Rockefeller will get all the money there is. Mr. Rockefeller has not lately seen fit to publish his estimate of the value of his possessions, but sanguine guessers rate him nowadays as pretty nearly a billionaire.

SHOCK CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS

How One Man Was Cured of All Desire for Liquor.

Jones, in spite of being a really kindly, honest fellow, with a loving wife, a cozy home and a flourishing young family, was rapidly becoming a slave to drink.

Like many other men, Jones usually lost all recollection of his actions after he had reached a certain period of intoxication. When, five or six weeks ago, he arrived at his home in a fit state for the experiment, his wife had him put to bed.

It was a pathetic scene, mixed with grim humor, when Jones awoke the next day, and was told that in trying to find the keyhole he had fallen down the area and broken his leg.

It is not likely he will drink to excess again, but it is heads this story of his loving wife's new cure for the alcoholic habit he will surely drop that limp which he now affects during his daily walk down Broadway.

Dead Man's Friends Had Satisfied Ends of Justice. John Fox, Jr., author of Kentucky mountain stories, and a Blue Grass man himself, was talking about the reign of lawlessness in the mountains of that state.

"I remember," he said, "the case of a man in a town where I lectured one time only, who shot a man in cold blood from behind a fence, and the authorities didn't do a thing with him."

"That's the trouble down there," responded an indignant listener. "The authorities seem to wink at that kind of killing. Did they know all the facts in this case?"

"Of course; but that didn't seem to make any difference." "Well, I don't see why they didn't punish the murderer."

"They weren't altogether to blame," said Mr. Fox, rather apologetically. "They must have been," contended the listener, still indignant.

Craved Salmon and Oregon Water. Many Oregonians were inclined to laugh at the Missouri woman mentioned a short time ago who insisted on going back to her native state because there were no catfish in Oregon.

An Encouraging Sign. Two retired tradesmen, residing in the country, were discussing matters generally, when one asked: "How is your son doing in the city?"

"Oh, he doesn't say much about his business," was the reply, "but he writes me that he's got a lot of friends." "That's very encouraging," remarked the other, "for it shows that he hasn't had to borrow money yet!"

Driving Him to It. "Aren't you afraid that after we are married you'll get tired of me?" "Never!" "Sometimes when I'm cross or petulant I fear you will get tired of me."

Good Enough Reason.

"Lillian is not sure that she loves Walter. Sometimes she thinks she does and at other times she's convinced she doesn't."

"And yet she's going to marry him?" "Oh, yes—that's all settled."

"But if she is not sure she loves him why doesn't she break the engagement?" "Because she's twenty-seven."
