OLD ENGLISH HOMES.

The flaff Was the Principal Apartment In the Middle Ages. Amid all the luxury of a modern home it is hard to realize how our Anglo-Saxon ancestors lived in what now would seem a condition of utter discomfort. Comfort was, however, gradually evolved, and the present arfined condition of domestic life was first beginning to assert itself.

In this connection it must be remembered that during the middle ages in England there was a general revolution in society. A new class had lately sprung into existence. Feudalism

With their social betterment came an improvement both in house construction and interior arrangement. Narrow streets were still the order of the day, sadly out of keeping with our modern ideas of sanitary requirements, while John Mitchell, the hardware dealer the houses were chiefly of the "half lower story of stone and those above, each projecting over the one below, in with bricks. The Armenian dealer in rugs is probably the craftiest of all shopkeepers, and his emissaries have so thoroughly raisacked the orient that the traveler is frequently advised in Persia and Arglaulstan to look for the rarest and the best specimens in London and especially in New York. Yet even here the experienced purchaser can find notable bargains. German Soups.

Corbin in Scribner's.

Soups furnish a curious instance in which Germany differs from other nations in the preparation of food. Milk soups sweet and savory, chocolate soups, almond soup and wine soup, frothed lemon soup and beer soup are among the number, while soups made of apples, pears, strawberries, currants and cherries are not uncommon. There are also a large number of fish toups which bear a strong resemblance to the fish soups of the Russian kitchen.
