The Russian Losses Placed at 116-Stories 1 Received at St. Petersburg Rather Conflicting Russians Said to Have Broken the burg, though somewhat conflicting, it Japanese Line Near Port Arthur and Driven | would appear that the Japanese have Them Back.

St. Petersburg, (By Cable.)-The unlucky as the Russians in naval feature of the day's war news was losses, but claim they have not yet information credited by the government that General Stoessel had made a successful sortie from Port Arthur, resulting in the defeat of the Japanese is responsible for their latest dis- adelphia with the object of making a with the loss of over 1,000 killed or aster. wounded. The Russian losses were 116 killed or wounded.

According to the story, the movement was carried out by a combination with a train bringing in war munitions and supplies and General Stoessel's force, communications being maintained by wireless telegraphy. The Japanese barred the route between the train and General Stoessel's force, whereupon the Russians attacked and routed the Japanese. After the engagement General Stoessel's force, together with the train, returned to Port Arthur.

Accounts, however, are somewhat conflicting, and there is some doubt as to whether the version mentioning the train is correct. But the operation is described as having been brilliantly carried out by the Russians. General Stoessel, it is said, made a new distribution of his guns beforehand, in order to cover the force taking part in the sortie. The Russian troops fought with bravery, breaking Japanese line and driving back the enemy for a considerable dis-

The general staff has received a message from General Stoessel giving his account of the fight north of Kinchou Monday last, but no report of the sortie above described.

The Russian regiments were attacked by two Japanese divisions with four batteries of artillery. The Russians lost 160 in killed or wounded, including an officer killed and Brigadier General Nadien slightly wounded. The Japanese losses are not known, but it is believed they were heavy. The enemy's advance on Kinchou was ar-The general staff explains that this attack on the Russian troops was arranged to take place simultaneously with a landing of Japanese troops in Kerr Bay, which was unsuccessful, owing to the number of Russian mines there. The general staff expects to hear of another stubborn fight at Kinchou. They apparently have suspended their advance. This inaction causes surprise and satisfaction, as every day's postponement of a decisive engagement is considered favorable for the Russians, who are daily increasing their forces, and are enabled by the delay to strengthen their positions. It is supposed that the recent rains hampered the movement of the Japanese artillery and compelled a temporary halt.
