Chicago, (Special) .- Amid the most inspiring scenes and in a tumult of enthusiasm Theodore Roosevelt and Charles Warren Fairbanks were nominated for president and vice president of the United States by the Republican National Convention, and the great work which called together over 1,000 delegates from all parts of the country was brought to a successful and glorious end.

No one could complain of a lack of enthusiasm the last day of the convention, for stirred by eloquent oratory the convention' spent a day in genuine enthusiasm seldom indulged in, even at a national convention.

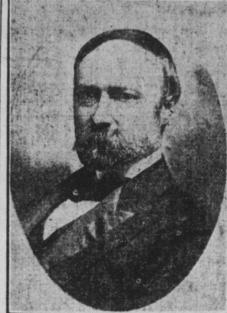

The great Coliseum, on Wabash avenue, was crowded to overflowing, and hundreds were content only to stand.

The delegates, as well as the crowds fortunate enough to hold admission tickets to the convention hall, were on hand early, for the session was to be called to order at 10 o'clock, and for over four hours the vast throng that fielled the Coliseum from cellar to roof gave itself up to un-

First Day.

Chicago, (Special) .-- The thirteenth Republican National Convention, which is to nominate President Theodore Roosevelt for President and Senator C. W. Fairbanks for Vice-President, opened at noon Tuesday The seats of delegates were well filled, but in the body of the hall there was room for 50 per cent. more spectators, and the gaileries were not more than one-third filled.

The hour set for the Convention to begin was noon, but the noon hour found Acting Chairman Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin, gavel in hand waiting patiently for the delegations to find their places before calling the Convention to order. Shortly after bor noon special messengers were sent out through the large hall in the effort to get the delegates seated With three severe raps of the gavel Mr. Payne finally called the Convention to order at 12.16 P. M. He made no speech, but promptly introduced Rev. Timothy P. Frost, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Evanston. Ill., and formerly pastor of First Methodist Episcopal- Church, Baltimore, who pronounced the opening prayer.

After the applause had subsided Chairman Payne in a few words expressed thanks for the table. He then

There was another shout from the Convention, which was prolonged when Governor Odell of New York ose to move that the action of the National Committee be approved. It was at once adopted by the Conven-

Simultaneously with former Secretary Root's appearance at the speaker's table an immense oil painting of President Roosevelt was unveiled at is right. The tableau brought forth a burst of enthusiasm.

Mr. Root was greeted with renewed cheers as he advanced to the speaker's stand. "Mr Chairman," he said, "I am deeply"-another burst of cheers cut him off. "I am deeply," resumed Mr. Root, when quiet was restored, and this time he was permitted to proceed. His speech was a long and thorough review in detail of the achievements of the Republi-an Administration of McKinley and Roosevelt since the last National Convention. It occupied an hour in deivery

Mr. Root had hardly struck his tride when cries of "Louder!" were card. His voice soon gained power, lowever, and his well-enunciated ords rang well through the still hall.

Reverential silence prevailed as the speaker alluded briefly to the assas-sination of President McKinley, and again applause as his successor's record was reviewed.

When Mr. Root said, "With Mc-Kinley, we remember Hanna," there was a demonstration, the delegates standing.

Uncle Joe Cannon, however, was the one to receive the preliminary ovation, and when he stepped forward to rap the convention to order the great throng burst forth in a mighty yell, which could not help but please the old man. Uncle Joe laid aside the croquet mallet given him to use as a gavel, and instead he wielded a small and useful gavel, and not only rapped on the presiding officer's table, but at one time during the excitement when the convention was in a delirium of enthusiasm he pounded the gavel on the floor of the platform.

No time was lost in getting at the real work of the day. A few notices were read to the delegates, the most important being the call of the meeting of the new national committee after the adjournment of the convention.

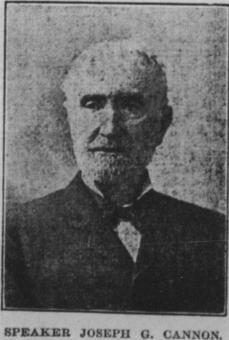

Amid applause, Secretary of the Convention Molloy began the call of states for nominations for president of the United States. Alabama, called first, yielded to New York, and ex-Governor Frank S.
