Millheim Loses Knitting Mill.

The knitting mill will be moved from Millheim to Newport, thus that town will lose one of its favored industries. The knitting mill has had a rather checkered record, but for about a year the plant has been operated very successfully under the ownership and management of Mr. Hoke, who was also popular as a citizen.

Surveying in Clearfield.

The Clearfield Republican has this to say : There are all kinds of railroad talk regarding new lines coming into this county in the near future. The Wabash and the Erie are the big people said to be behind the several corps of engineers at work in the northwestern and southern sections. Until there is something more tangible than the 'paper lines" the people in the localities affected will not become violently enthusiastic.
