

TERMS.—The terms of subscription to the Reporter are one dollar per year in advance.

ADVERTISEMENTS.—20 cents per line for three insertions, and 5 cents per line for each subsequent insertion. Other rates made known on application.

RESOLUTIONS AND CARDS OF THANKS.—Resolutions of respect will be charged for at the rate of one-half cent per word, (payable in advance) the minimum charge being $1.00. Cards of thanks, two cents per word, minimum charge, fifty cents, also payable in advance.

The figures opposite your name on label of paper indicate the date to which your subscription is paid. When no date is given the date implied is July, 1904; when no month is given the month implied is July—thus: "00" means July, 1900; "01", means July, 1901; "04" means that your subscription is paid in advance to July, 1904. Other months than July are indicated by abbreviations. When you pay your subscription always examine your label, and when a notice appears that corrections have been made, compare and report immediately if you have not been given proper credit. No receipts for subscription will be sent by mail unless by special request. The change of date on label ought to be sufficient evidence. Money by mail is reasonably safe. There have been no losses to this date.

Autumn Arbor Day Next Friday.

The governor has designated next Friday as autumn arbor day, with the request that the public schools arrange suitable exercises, such as the discussion of events which transpired under trees like the Charter Oak, the Liberty Elm, the William Penn tree and others which have become famous in history. Let the economic value of trees be discussed, and, above all, let trees be planted upon the school grounds, around the homes and along the highways, so that the day may be profitable from the economic point of view as well as valuable for educational purposes.

CENTRE COUNTY IN THE CIVIL WAR.
148th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

By T. P. Meyer, Sergeant Co. A., 148th Regiment, P. V.

CHAPTER IX.

The 148th P. V. broke camp at noon, May 2nd, and with its Corps (2nd) took up the line of march northward along the Richmond and Danville railroad, came eight miles, and bivouacked near Jetersville, on the Jetersville battlefield. At a very early hour next morning the march was resumed along the said railroad, after marching twenty-five miles, we camped for the night.

At 7 a. m. May 4th, the march was resumed, and kept up briskly till toward evening, with the exception of the usual restful halt for hot coffee at noon, marched twenty miles, and camped about five miles from Richmond, Va.

On the 5th we moved a few miles and camped in sight of Manchester, on the James river opposite Richmond, and brushed up for a fair display on our march through Richmond, the ex-Confederate Capital. Rained hard all night, and till noon of this day, when the sky cleared and the weather was hot. In consequence of much rain lately, the roads were almost impassable, greatly fatiguing men and horses, and plastering all with mud. In many places the roads were necessarily destroyed, for the movements of the artillery and wagon trains.

There was no moon, and the night was dark, yet it was one of the most lively nights ever known to the Army of the Potomac.

The troops were in a wakeful, rejoicing humor, as the deafening cheers at brief intervals that made the welkin ring, plainly indicated. The men were up, and the entire camp was wide awake all night. We had a grand illumination. The camps, in every direction, as far as the eye could reach, was an ocean of glittering lights. Trees were filled with lights, from the lower to the top-most branches sky-rockets, and mimic bomb-shells were continually hissing through the sky. Complete quiet did not settle down upon the camp till near morning, and Reveille found the men slow and sleepy.

Saturday morning, May 6th, 1865, came in clear and bright; all was sunshine and loveliness. The weather soon became oppressively hot, and the heavily uniformed and luggage burdened troops suffeted greatly from the intense heat; sunstrokes were quite numerous.

The 148th packed up and was ready for the road at an early hour, but we did not leave our bivouac till 11 a. m., when we moved out, marched to, and through Manchester, crossed the James river, just below the ruins of the Danville railroad bridge, on pontoon bridges; marched through Richmond, the ex-Confederate capital, down Front, out Carey, past Libby Prison, up Main Street, in review, with music and unfurled banners; the review was fine, but did not seem to delight the people of Richmond. No shouts or waving flags greeted us any where. Not a word that would offend, was said to any one by any of the boys of our Regiment.

Libby Prison was viewed by all the boys with great interest. It was then filled with Confederate prisoners, whom we hailed and gaped with, "Say Johnnies, how do you like Libby?" "Very much," they good humoredly answered.

On the portico of the former Confederate Capitol, and under a draping of magnificent, new U. S. Flags, stood Gen. Meade, and to his right, Gen. Hasloek, military head of the District, and other general officers.

On the high flag-staff, near by, floated a large, beautiful, silk, "starry banner," and no one any longer questioned its right to be there.

From the window of a fine mansion on Main Street was heard the pipey voice of a lady shouting, "good bye!" and, "hurrah for Jeff Davis!" We answered not in words, but gave the "Tiger" groan. A little farther on, we saw, through the open window of a fine house, gaily dressed ladies, dancing to the music of a "two step," played by one of the bands in our moving column, and we gave the "dear girls," a shout of encouragement.

Emerging from the city, we marched due north, crossed the west branch of the Chickahominy river, and bivouacked for the night five miles from Richmond, after marching about twelve miles.

At 7 a. m. Sunday morning, May 7th, we again moved out, and marched rapidly along the Richmond and Fredericksburg railroad, with the usual halt for hot coffee at noon, and bivouacked at five p. m. about five miles north of the Pamunkey river, after a march of twenty miles. Crossed during the day, the main branch of the Chickahominy, the Little York, and Pamunkey rivers, the last on pontoon bridges.

It's the hard rubs of the world that makes a man bright.

ALFALFA will grow anywhere if the conditions are made right, and give from 10 to 50 dollars worth of Protein to the acre. Absence of the proper soil bacteria is the most common difficulty and is easily overcome by using 20 to 50 lbs. of impregnated soil to the acre, at or before seeding. I can furnish soil from a fifteen year old field that gave over 4 tons of hay to the acre last year, and yet the bacteria is very abundant. Send for prices.
