WORK OF THE COURT.

Postponed Cases Makes Second Week of Court Unnecessary. (Reported by W. Harrison Walker, Esq.) Commonwealth vs. William and John Gilliland and Jacob Jackson. These defendants were charged with crime of larceny by George Dale. From the facts in this case, it appeared that some time last July some one broke a lock on the house containing the meat of Mr. Dale, and stole several pieces. Mr. Dale testified simply to the effect that the meat was stolen, but that he did not know who broke the lock, or anything further about the time. In support of the prosecution, they called a blacksmith from Lenoart a witness, who testified that the same afternoon he shod one of the horses belonging to the defendants, and that upon examination of the footprints left in and around the residence of Mr. Dale, they corresponded exactly to one of the horses driven by these defendants. They then called a constable who testified that he went to the house of one of the defendants and found several pieces of meat which afterwards were identified by Mr. Dale and his daughter to be the meat stolen. The defendant's contention that they were not at Mr. Dale's at that time; that they had driven from State College to Lenoart and had the horses shod as testified to by the prosecutor as well as by the blacksmith, and that after that they got into their wagon and drove down as far as Risher's hill on the Boalsburg pike, they then turned around and went home. They gave as their reason for turning around on the hill that they were simply trying to find out whether one of their horses was all right or not. They also called a witness who testified that he saw somebody in a covered wagon at Mr. Dale's about eleven o'clock on the same night but could not identify the person. The jury rendered a verdict of guilty. Sentence of the court has not as yet been pronounced.

Earl Freeman, of Bellefonte, who was charged with the crime of larceny by C. W. Smith, prosecutor, entered a plea of guilty.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Craig G. Grassmire, who was charged by his wife with desertion, considerable testimony was taken. From the evidence it appeared that the defendant could not pay his taxes on his property, and that by reason thereof he was sold out, at which time Mrs. Grassmire left her home and went to the home of her parents, near Roland. She testified that Mr. Grassmire had some very bad habits and that he refused to support her, and that she was compelled to do something to make a living. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, but directed the defendant to pay all the costs in the case.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Charles Hardy it appeared that some months ago he and Thomas Gilson, the prosecutor, were in Phillipsburg, drank freely at the hotel of that place, when at one bar the prosecutor pulled out twenty dollars in money and his gold watch. He testified that the defendant took the watch and money, after which they started to the train to go to Houzdale, but between the Potter House and the station the defendant left the prosecutor and could not be found for some time. The defendant alleged that the prosecutor was very drunk, and that he also handed him the money and watch, and that it was his opinion that he must have lost it. He swore positively to this fact, but the jury, after some consideration of the case, returned a verdict of guilty, and recommended the mercy of the court.

The grand jury reported that they had found fourteen true bills and ignored three; recommended that the floor of the balcony in the jail be repaired; that the prison wall be coated with cement; that the sheriff's department be repaired; new files for the commissioners' office; tiling in vaults be re-laid. The prison was reported kept in good condition.
