HUNTERS AND FARMERS HAVE RIGHTS

Which Each Should Respect in Order to Avoid Trouble.

At this time of year there is apt to be a good deal of friction between gunner convened at ten o'clock Monday morn- and the farmer. There should be sympathy for both. They are arrogant and insulting and they give not the least recognition to the farmers' rights. They will not only shoot the game upon his premises, without permission, but they have even been known to shoot his poultry, and in case of protest, to threaten to shoot the farmer himself

The country is large, i is not policed, the farmer is busy and has not time to stand guard over his property. It is small wonder, therefore, that when he is treated in the manner mentioned above, by some men who claim to be sportsmen, he should become harsh in his demeanor toward all the men he sees carrying guns. He is scarcely to be blamed, in view of the circumstances, for the hostility which | he exhibits in many cases. He is willing enough to be a good fellow in most instances, but he only wants to affiliate with the kind of men who show some evidence of possessing the principle of good fellowship. He has no more fancy for a hoodlum than anybody else.
