School Days.

Off to school, With a merry laugh! While the spirit beam With its youthful dreams, And the eye is bright As a star at night, And the check is red As a red rose bed, And their glowing healt' Is a world of wealth As they romp and sing And shout and ring The changes down On the quiet town, Till all doth share The gladness there Of the boys and girls When the day is fair.

In at school And a solemn look! For the joy is gone And the troubles on, When the puzzled face In its wonted place Is brooding o'er Its tragic lore, And they peg away The livelong day Till the brain is dull In the throbbing skull And the soul's arack With a breaking back At the weary task That the masters ask, But they have from me My sympathy, When the day is gray

Out of school With a heave and sigh! But the face of youth Is stamped with truth. For the way of a book Gives a placid look And a quiet mien In the soul is seen, And the work begun Is never done; But the childish sorrow Knows no tomorrow. And the youthful sigh Shall soon pass by! So my heart is sad And my heart is glad For the boys and girls When the day is sped. -I. F. C., in Baltimore Sun.

"There is no greatness like simplicity," quoth my Cousin Randolph, beaming and complacent.

I agreed. "It's an excellent card at times." I said.

"It's the ace of trumps," said he, "when hearts lead." For ease, he dangled his leg over the arm of his chair. "I tell you a simple mind may conceive a scheme that's a triumph of finance, and if one can only manage to look simple-"

I glanced at his fair fat face, with she'd bought and paid for them. Simple, isn't it?" I began to laugh; this commercial innocence was novel. "And then, of course, they'd go away-and I return the check to dear Aunt, and all is well. That's how it looks to her."

"And you actually got it?" He took a slip of pink paper from his pocket-book, and regarded it affectionately. "Yes. I actually got it. But seeing that the banks all close so early on Saturdays-" He signed and returned it to its cover. "It's playing it rather low down on dear Aunt, I admit," he said, sorrowfully, "especially as she had crossed the thing to make it safe. She thinks she has just lent me her signature for a few days. But suppose I happened to lose it, and somebody else found it and discounted it-with a little, hard swearing thrown inwhat? And that's where you come in.'

"And she'll believe all that-that footle?"

"To the simple all is simplicity," quoth he, "and I don't think the dear lady knows what 'footle' means."

A violent ringing of the telephone bell interrupted us for a moment. "That's the worst of fixing up one's rooms like some beastly office," observed my Cousin Randolph casually. "Hang on to the thing and see what it wants. You're nearest."

"And if it's anything unpleasant," he went on, as the bell rang again, "say I'm away and you're my clerk. Say I'm dead, if you like." "I'm hanged if I do," I retorted. 'Hullo!" I held the thing to my ear. A squeaky voice, small and distant, responded. "Are you there?" "Yes, thanks. 'What is it?"

"I'm the Grand Hotel-the-yestel. Smithers, my name is, Miss Smithers. S-m-i-t-h-e-r-s;" she spelled it for my better understanding.

"She says her name is Smithers nounced. now.'

Aunt, anu I should show the check in | can find most any kind of savage antproof-in most conclusive proof-that mal that you get in America except alligators, Grizzles, black bears and mountain lions are commonly killed there," says Hugh Snierly, of Sheridan, Wyo. "Some of the men that come out there to hunt think that if they stir 100 yards away from camp they must be armed to the teeth for fear of being attacked by a bear or a 'panther' and killed. There is a heap more danger of getting killed on account of leaving your gun at home when you go down Market street. Some one might shoot you on the street in a big city, but it is dead sure that a bear or a mountain lion will never attack you unless you drive him to it.

"I've hunted through the best districts for big game in this country, and I've seen a good many grizzlies. but I've never seen one of them go after a man unless he was cornered or wounded. If you run into a grizzly bear in a lonely place you'll hear a grunt, something like that of a mammoth hog, and then there will be a mighty crashing of underbrush as he makes off in the opposite direction as fast as he can go. All you can generally see of a mountain lion is a tawny streak as he makes off at incredible speed. If he has any intention of going after you it must be his intention to go around the world and catch you in the rear, for if you are standing to the east of him he is sure to go due west.

"Mountain Hons in the winter time will follow sleighs at a distance, wailing as they go, but there is nothing in that to inspire terror, for I don't think they have ever been known to close in on anybody. Their terror of human beings is the thing which makes them hard to shoot. In ail the time that I have been in the

FOUGHT WITH MONSTER EAGLE.

Youth Battles for Life with Monarch of the Air.

News has reached here of a terrible fight C. D. Estill had a few days ago with a monster eagle near Philo, says a dispatch from Uklah, Cal. Estill was plowing and noticed a large bird in a tree. He stopped his work and when he saw it was an eagle he be gan throwing rocks at it.

The bird was hit several times and commenced circling around overhead. too high for Estill to throw. Estill was standing by a picket fence watching the maneuvers of the bird, when it suddenly swooped down and struck him a terrific blow with its wings. Estill grabbed a picket from the fence and then began a battle for life that eventually ended in the killing of the eagle. Time after time it came at the boy and struck him with its wings and beak, sometimes receiving blows from the picket in return. "Estill succeeded in breaking one of the eagle's wings, but did not drive it away.

Both were becoming weak, and the eagle managed to stick his talons in the boy's arm, nearly tearing it from his shoulder and causing him to faint. When he recovered the eagle was lying dead but a few feet from him. The eagle measured ten feet from Willie-Dere wuz ten last Sunday, long. Estill is still under the doctip to tip and had talons eight inches

GIANTS OF OTHER DAYS.

Fossil of a New Animal and One of the Ichthyosaurus Found.

Important discoveries in Western fossil beds are announced by Prof. John C. Merriam, head of the paleon tological department of the University of California. A remarkable specimen of the very early ichthyosaurus was uncarthed in the middle triassic limestones in Nevada. The specimen showed the greater part of the an ferior half of the body, including the skull, vertebrae and front limb or paddle, the upper arm and forearm of the latter being perfect and distinct Another important find was that made in the Samuel Cave in Shasta county. It consisted of the greater part of the skeleton of an animal as large as an elk, but with distinctly sheep and goat affinities. The most noticeable feature of the fossil is the horns, which are so large and magnificently formed that they make the animal distinctive among bovines, at least of any type known here.

The skeleton will soon be set up in the Paleontological museum at Berke ley
