The Old-fashioned Winter.

The "old-fashioned winter" has lost all its value as a standard for the comparison of modern winters, and it is in vain that the oldest inhabitant cudgels his memory for winters with heavy snowfall and prolonged cold. We have now had two summers and two winters consecutively of temperatures below the average, and the winter from which we are emerging has little to fear from comparison with any of the winters of which exceptional severity is alleged, because there are few surviving witnesses or records to confute the venerable persons who imagine the weather of their youth to have been severer than that of their advanced age.

DEATHS.

GEORGE HENRY HOMAN.

George Henry Homan was summoned to the other world Saturday of last week. Mention of Mr. Homan's condition had been made in previous issues of the Reporter, and on the day of his death the not unexpected paralytic stroke was received by him at about ten o'clock in the morning. After that hour Mr. Homan scarcely moved a muscle and at four o'clock death came to his relief.

It was just seven weeks previous that he had been taken to the Will's Eye Hospital, Philadelphia, where he was pronounced, after the most careful examination, to be in a very delicate condition, and the family given information that his disease was not only incurable, but that death would come in a very short time and precisely in the manner in which it did come. Before being taken to the hospital, Mr. Homan had a slight stroke, and the results were paralysis of the eyelids and a perceptible weakening of his mental powers.

Mr. Homan was born in Stone Valley, Huntingdon county, March 18th, 1852, making his age just fifty-two years. His marriage to Mrs. Homan (nee Miss Emma Neese) took place March 7th, 1878. The children born to them were Albert B., of Altoona; Frank V., Philadelphia; Charles C., Williamsport; Archie E. and Clayton H., at home, and one daughter, Miss Elsie, whose death occurred in August, 1900. He is also survived by the widow and three brothers, namely: Samuel J. and Solomon, both of Williamsport, and William, of Menno, South Dakota.

The deceased enjoyed almost perfect health during his entire life. Being a farmer by occupation he was accustomed to hard labor which was performed with little or no fatigue. He was a man of retiring disposition and was seldom seen away from his home. Interment took place at the Union cemetery, at Farmers Mills, Wednesday morning, Rev. J. M. Rearick, of the Lutheran church, officiating.

JOSEPH BEEZER.

Tuesday of last week, Joseph Beezer, a highly respected gentleman, died at his home on the banks of Spring Creek near Roopsburg, of infirmities incident to old age. He had been ailing for several days and gradually and peacefully he sank to rest.

Joseph Beezer was of German nativity and was born in Strassburg-on-the-Rhine, Germany, October 15, 1842. In 1865 he came to this country remaining a year and returning to the old country but only for a short time when he again came to America locating permanently in Centre county.

ROBERT VALENTINE.

Robert Valentine died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Summerfield Bond, in Baltimore, Maryland, after an illness of short duration. Mrs. Valentine was formerly of Bellefonte, where he was associated with the iron industries of the county. He is survived by his wife, and two daughters—Mrs. Bond and Miss Emily, both of Baltimore.

Interment was made at Bellefonte, the funeral being held from the home of Miss Emily Natt.

He is famous as "Old Jed Prouty," and is supported by a company of seven people, who present a comedy sketch entitled "Jed Prouty's Visit to Boston." Bert Coote & Co. will present "A Lamb in Wall Street," said to be the best vaudeville vehicle this famous actor has appeared in since joining the vaudeville ranks.
