TERRIFIC STORM

Sweeps Penn's Valley Monday Afternoon—Buildings Unroofed, etc.

A terrific storm, accompanied by a great electrical display and a sprinkling of hail, passed over the entire of Penn's Valley, Monday afternoon, between the hours of three and four o'clock.

The heavens grew black in the west, and gradually the whole sky became inky darkness. Vivid flashes of lightning and heavy thunder was the advance guard, and a strong, defying wind swept over every section.

No damage whatever was done by wind in Centre Hall, and the rainfall here was not as heavy as at other points. The total rainfall here was one-half inch.

About one-half of the roof on the barn of William Tate, west of Centre Hall, was carried away. The rafters and all were taken. Mr. Tate lives on the Christian Houser farm, which he purchased a short time ago.

George Emerick and his force of men were threshing on the mountain farm owned by Josiah Dale when the storm came up. The large barn doors were carried off, and a fanning mill that had been taken from the barn and placed outside was carried several hundred feet, and cyclone like, was planted right-side-up and no harm done.

Nearly the whole of the roof on the Logan school house, near J. P. Grove's, Gregg township, was removed, and one gable end blown in.

The wind pump on the William Colyer farm, on the pike east of Old Fort, tenanted by Calvin Ruhl, was torn down.

In the vicinity of Spring Mills the wind left well marked trails. Several dozen large pine trees were leveled on the various Allison wood tracts, besides the up-rooting of many other trees, of less value, in various sections.

The greater part of the roof on Daniel Ripka's farm barn was carried away. Henry P. Lingie has also a small stable without a roof on it as a result of the storm. Mrs. Sarah Reeder, in Georges Valley, suffered a similar loss, the damage being done to a barn.

At Millheim the storm tackled big game. A portion of the roof on the flouring mill of Ezra Auman was blown away, and other damage done.

The farm barn of John Stoner, located near the mill, was badly wrecked, about one-third of the roof being taken away.

The west end of the barn of John Wert, near Tusseyville, was wrecked, and a part of the roof torn off.

The barn of John Maize, one-third mile out from Millheim, also suffered the loss of its roof.

The stables of the old Faust hotel, in the Seven Mountains, made famous as the hiding place and scene of the capture of a band of robbers now serving in the Western pen, was razed to the ground, according to the report of Patsie Garrity and Frank Pennington.

At Farmers Mills a buggy shed was unroofed for Jacob Neese, and the roof of a shop was lifted for Amos Dunkle.

A very desirable and satisfactory way to store smoked meat is to put it into a box and cover it with common salt. The salt will keep all manner of insects from the meat. Don't be afraid of over salting by packing in this way.

ACCIDENT AT TUSSEYVILLE.

Horse Ran Over and Seriously Injured Mrs. Adam Krumrine and Small Boy.

A serious accident happened at Tusseyville Sunday evening in which Mrs. Adam Krumrine and Lee, son of Foster Frazier, were seriously injured.

After services at that point, George Smith, of Centre Hill, untied his horse and with his sister, Mrs. Bowersox and her little daughter got into the buggy and started toward home. On going down the hill toward Swartz's store the breeching, it is supposed, broke which let the buggy strike the horse and caused him to become frightened. On the road were a large number of persons on their way home from services, and among these were the persons mentioned above who received serious injuries.

The horse in his flight struck Mrs. Krumrine and knocked her to the ground. She was carried to her home by friends. Dr. Allison was called and discovered the lady, besides internal injuries, had several ribs broken.

The injured boy was carried home by his father, and the services of Dr. H. S. Alexander sought. Although seriously hurt the lad is expected to recover, and is practically out of danger.

The horse was stopped after running a short distance. Neither of the occupants of the buggy were injured, which may be attributed to the good horsemanship of Mr. Smith, who pluckily held to the animal and finally subdued him.

DEATHS.

ANNA M. DEININGER.

The news of the death of Mrs. J. O. Deininger was received with much sorrow by every resident in Centre Hall who had an intimate acquaintance with her. Death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Stewart, in New Bloomfield, Wednesday of last week, after an illness of ten days of bronchial pneumonia. Her age was seventy-three years, seven months. Interment was made at Centre Hall Saturday, Rev. J. R. Sechrist, the pastor of the church of which the deceased for many years was a consistent member, officiating, assisted by Rev. E. Crumbling.

Deceased's maiden name was Anna M. Neiman and was united in marriage to J. O. Deininger, who survives her, October 14, 1852. She was the mother of seven children, the living of whom are: Mrs. Lucy Henney, Centre Hall; Clement F., at present in the west; Mrs. J. W. Stewart, New Bloomfield. The deceased are: Mary Ann, wife of Samuel Shoop; Clara, Emanuel and William.

Mrs. Deininger was a woman of retired disposition, but always active in church work. As a mother she had great concern for her children, and always showed the kindest feeling toward all children who happened to be about her. In this particular the writer has many pleasant recollections of Mrs. Deininger, and during her lifetime was held in the highest esteem.

DAVID GLASGOW.

The news of the death of David Glasgow, of Haines township, was a surprise to many of his friends and acquaintances in this part of the valley. Mr. Glasgow moved from near Tusseyville to near Woodward during the latter part of March. He had been complaining ever since September of last year, but only took his bed about three weeks prior to his death. His family physician, Dr. Frank, of Millheim, attributed his suffering to a stricture of the intestines, and a post-mortem examination conducted by Dr. Frank and Dr. Musser proved the diagnosis to have been correct.

Interment was made at Tusseyville Wednesday, Rev. Dainel Gress, of the Reformed church, officiating.

The surviving children are as follows: James Glasgow, Alexandria; David S. Glasgow, Jr., Tusseyville; Mary J., wife of George Seanson, Linden Hall; Emma, wife of James Harshbarger, Potters Mills; Ida, wife of William C. Harshbarger, Altoona; Sarah, wife of Mr. Bathurst, Bellefonte; Robert Glasgow, at home.

Y., at which time the child was left with her grandmother, as she was ill then. The cause of her death was pneumonia.

The rain and wind storm which swept through the valley Monday afternoon, did considerable damage in the way of breaking down trees, unroofing buildings and in many cases overthrowing and wholly destroying the buildings.

Quarantine For Meningitis.

Dr. George G. Groff, of the State Board of Health, advises strict quarantine in cases of cerebro-spinal meningitis. Precautions, such as isolation and fumigation, will be taken in cases of this disease in the future and when the malady has a fatal termination, private interment will be observed. Although grown up persons are liable to the disease, it is more common among children, who are very susceptible to attack.

Success is a game of hide and seek.
