Miss E. Margaret Keller, stenographer for the Beall Grain Company, Kansas City, Missouri, writes that her mother, Mrs. Henry Keller, instructed her to "pay up the Reporter"; that she would just as soon miss a first class dinner, any day, as to miss reading a single issue of the Reporter. That sounds all right.

Dogs Kill 150 Hares.

Monday night dogs killed one hundred and fifty Belgian hares, the property of Aaron Thomas, Centre Hall, who makes rabbit growing a business.

The hares were kept in a dozen or more strongly built pens, with a wire netting in front, and stood two feet from the ground. The dogs tore holes into the netting to gain entrance.

The carcasses of the hares were viewed by half the population of the town.

Chopped off Index Finger.

W. A. Catherman, the Linden Hall blacksmith, had the misfortune to chop off the index finger of his left hand. The accident occurred Thursday of last week. Mr. Catherman was splitting wood, holding the ax in one hand, and the stick of wood in the other, when his foot, which was resting on a round piece of wood, slipped, causing the accident. The bone was completely severed.

The finger was sewed to the hand by Dr. Kidder, twelve stitches being employed.

Tenant Farmers.

The numerous sales of farms in Penns Valley has caused a bit of anxiety among the tenants. The contemplated changes given out are: Wm. Homan will move to the Stump farm purchased by his father. The sale of the Rev. Rearek farm will not affect the arrangement of tenants. Cloyd Brooks will move to that place, and Dr. Bitner will take a half interest in the stock, etc. Samuel Klinefelter will remain on the Speicher farm. Henry Houser will move to the Miller farm, and Mr. Miller will retire. The sale of the Strohm farm will not necessitate a change, the tenant speaking well of both the purchaser, Robert Smith, and the farm.

Fell Through Trap Door With Lamp.

The presence of mind displayed by Merchant W. H. Stuart saved his store from destruction by fire. In the ware room of the Stuart store, at Bousburg there is a trap door, through which boxes, burlap, excelsior, etc., reach the cellar, as a rule the door is closed, but Saturday evening it was open, and Mr. Stuart, with a lighted oil lamp in his hands, fell through it. The parking was ignited, and a brisk flame shot up. Mr. Stuart was not seriously hurt, and at once put his wits to work. A woolen blanket was hurriedly secured, and by means of it the fire was smothered.

Joe Weber's All-Star company.

"Higgledy-Piggledy," the musical farce now in its last week at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, is described in the program as "A Rigmorole of Fun, Fancy and Foolishness. Produced under the personal direction of Joseph M. Weber. Book and lyrics by Edgar Smith, music by Maurice Levi."

Possibly there needs little more said to tell the story. For ten years it has been the plan of Mr. Weber to gather at his cozy little music hall on Broadway, the most distinguished comedians and comedienne in America, and then have Mr. Edgar Smith prepare a vehicle which would serve best to fit the peculiar humorous individuality of each of the players. The result has been a long career of successes and not one failure. In addition to this there have been given each season from one to two or three burlettas, parodies on big successful plays and the current piece is a travesty upon the Ade comedy and named "The College Widower."

The only matinees this week are set for Wednesday and Saturday. The evening performances will begin at 8:10.
