DARE CANDIDATES TREAT?

Attorneys Declare it Would be Considered Illegal by Court and Jury.

An opinion prepared by Harvey J. Heiny, William J. Rourke and Isaac Heiser, expounding their view of the "corrupt practices" act, was presented Saturday to a committee appointed by political candidates and leaders in Berks county who hired the above lawyers to interpret the new law.

Although the opinion is exhaustive, dealing with every phase of the statute's provisions, popular interest was centered on the problem as to the exact latitude a candidate might have in relieving the thirst of the honest voter.

On this point the opinion says: "We believe that the treating of voters by a candidate while on a canvass or at political meetings would properly be regarded by a court and jury as done with intent to influence the voters; would be held to constitute an illegal expenditure within the meaning of the act, and would, therefore be a violation of the act."

"We would say, however, that a man, even though a candidate, may treat his personal friends and associates as he has been accustomed to do, provided it be done without intent to violate the manifest spirit of the act."

Apparently, the only hope for the thirsty lies in cultivating the friendship of candidates or men likely to become candidates. The beer-launched campaign seems to be a thing of the past.

This being the first formal opinion on the act, copies have been made for circulation among candidates of various counties. The local candidates in Berks county will be governed entirely by the opinion as given.

Kelley, et. al.

Letter to J. G. Dauberman, Centre Hall, Pa.

Dear Sir: This story cuts two ways, and teaches two sets of people. Father Calvin, Westley, R. L., had his church and residence painted. Good job; and this is how he went at it.

Measured all carefully—seems to have known Devoe. Then got bids from the painters, paint to be supplied by them and by him.

Saved $70 by using Devoe. One of those painters ought to have got that money.

Yours truly F. W. DEVOE & Co., New York.

THREATEN TO OPEN BOOKS.

Chairman Cortelyou and Treasurer Bliss Hope to Discourage Further Proceedings.

It is said that Chairman Cortelyou and Treasurer Bliss are contemplating opening up the books of the Republican National committee and making public the list of contributors to the campaign fund in the event of the writ of habeas corpus applied for in the case of George W. Perkins being denied. This would be an excellent move in any event, and should not depend upon any contingency. It would probably disclose that a number of corporations besides life insurance companies had been using their stockholders' money for purposes not contemplated by their charters. It would throw light also perhaps upon other matters of importance and indicate the reasons why certain individuals enjoyed a political pull. Such a statement would add impetus to the movement to prevent corporations from contributing to campaign funds. It may be that the threat to make this statement is intended to discourage further legal proceedings, but if so it should not avail. By all means let us have all the facts in the case, regardless of the consequences.

LOCALS.

A son was born to Rev. and Mrs. Ward K. Shultz, at Cearfoss, Md.

H. F. Musser, treasurer of the Potter township auditors, was in Centre Hall Monday, and attended to some little matters in connection with his office.

Mrs. Rebecca Murray, last week, visited her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Harter, at Aaronsburg. Mrs. Harter is in her ninety-second year, and is enjoying the best of health.

Wm. H. Smith, of near Madisonburg, was a brief caller Monday morning. John R. Smetzer, of near Potters Mills, was another of the Reporter readers to pay his respects to this office.

W. F. Roeky, the produce merchant of Tusseyville, was a caller Monday. Mr. Roeky does an extensive business in his line, and has earned the reputation of giving correct weights and counts.

The vaudeville performance in Grange Arcadia Friday evening was all right in every respect. One or two characters displayed unusually good qualities, and were quite at home on the stage. Some of the cast were natives of Pine Grove Mills.

Miss Lucina Swartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Swartz, of Northumberland, has been among friends in and about Centre Hall for the past few weeks. She states that her parents had a rather successful trucking season last summer, and that barring some sickness in the family they have been getting along very well.

Rebersburg.

Mrs. Landis and son Gustaf, of Altoona, are at present visiting in this vicinity.

Calvin Zeigler and wife, of Spring Mills, spent Friday at this place as the guests of C. H. Smull.

Wm. Hackman recently hired Joseph Solt, of Smuliton, to assist him in his blacksmith shop.

John Spangler has employed G. P. Garret to do some repairing at his house at the east end of town.

Tuesday of last week George Cornman moved two miles east to this place, on the Henry Meyer homestead.

Thursday of last week James Gramley moved from Madisonburg to the home of his aged mother at this place. T. A. Auman will teach a nine weeks term of summer school, to commence the third Monday of this month.

Prof. Edwin Brungart and wife and Miss Ethel Harter left on Thursday for Sellersgrove, where they will make their home.

Thursday evening Samuel Shaffer, who retired from the hotel business, made auction of the bar-room fixtures. Elmer Hubler was the auctioneer.

The Misses Nora and Mabel Klinefelter, who spent the past week at this place visiting their mother, Mrs. Zeigler, left on Monday for State College, where they are employed.

Woodward.

J. B. Gentzel moved to Brush Valley on Tuesday.

Dr. Ard made a business trip to Lewisburg on Saturday.

J. Frank Torbet, of Jersey Shore, was in town a few days last week.

Ellwood F. Orndorf transacted some business at Bellefonte last Saturday.

B. F. Cohn, J. L. Kreamer and C. D. Motz were to Millheim, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Boob, of Nittany, are visiting at J. L. Kreamer's.

Misses Bessie Etlinger and Mary Snyder spent the Sabbath with their parents.

Mrs. Emma Nien, of Yeagertown, visited her mother, Mrs. Glantz, one day last week.

Miss Bessie Voneda, having spent a week with her parents, returned to Reading, at which place she is employed.

Mrs. H. A. Kessinger and daughter Mary, after spending a few days with relatives at Nittany, returned home last Friday.

A suit that is always made too large is a damage suit.

CENTRAL P. A. M. E. CONFERENCE.

The Thirty-seventh Annual Session at the First Church.

The thirty-seventh annual session of the Central Pennsylvania conference of the Methodist Episcopal church is now in progress in the First Methodist church, of Tyrone.

Today there are almost 70,000 members cared for by two hundred and sixty pastors in this conference. They worship in six hundred and twenty-seven church buildings erected at a cost of $3,350,000, with parsonage property valued at $600,000. There are six hundred and forty Sunday schools with an aggregate membership of 72,000 scholars led by and army of 10,000 teachers. Last year these churches paid for pastoral support $290,000 and laid an offering of $61,500 on the altars of the churches for missions, with munificent gifts to other general benevolences aggregating to almost a like amount.

Rev. J. Ellis Bell, presiding elder of the Altoona district, read his report, which showed that one minister and one hundred and fifty of the laity had died during the year. During the year 2,078 souls bowed at the altars, of whom 1760 have joined the church. Four new churches have been completed and dedicated this year, making the number twenty-six during Rev. Bell's five-year term. Debts have been reduced and there has been an increase of contributions to connectional and benevolent work.

Jurors for Special Court.

There will be a special term of court commencing Monday, May 7th. Following are the jurors for the special session:

DESERT BILL OF FARE

SOURCES FROM WHICH THE INDIAN SUPPLIES HIS LARDER.

Some of the Things Eaten, Especially the Insect and Reptilian Foods, Are Not Only Not Inviting, but Are Not Even Palatable.

About some of the Indian villages of the west are to be seen small patches of maize or a few tiny melon patches, but these cultivated areas are of little account as compared with the number of persons to be fed. These, too, are exceptions rather than the rule, a majority of the towns having no such cultivated fields.

In the various parts of the arid region which shelters so great a portion of our barbarian population is found a tree remarkable for certain properties. The botanical name of this plant is Prosopis Juliflora. It is popularly known as the algaroba, or honey mesquite. This tree thrives with little moisture, grows, with thick, bushy top, to a height of twenty to forty feet, affords shelter from the wind and sun, and, best of all in the sight of the hungry natives, it yields abundant crops of fruit known as mesquite beans. The slim green pods hang in clusters from the tips of the boughs, often bending the branches nearly to breaking, so abundant do they grow. The pods, which are six or seven inches long, are pulpy, juicy, fairly palatable and nourishing.

These beans are gathered, dried and stored in the peculiar granaries of the Indians—huge baskets holding several bushels each—and are pulverized when wanted for food in wooden or stone mortars, and the meal thus formed is soaked in water and eaten without further preparation or it is baked into a sort of unleavened bread. It is the principal and favorite food of several tribes.

The screw bean is another food product, less plentiful, but even more highly prized because of its sugary qualities. This fruit is often eaten as plucked from the tree. It ripens the latter part of June or in July, a little later than the mesquite bean.

In some of the mountain sections the Prunus andersonii, or chamchis, is found in abundance. The pits of this fruit are pounded in mortars, and the meal is then eaten. There are many varieties of the cactus fruit which are utilized for food, the fruit of the Opuntia tuna or prickly pear being a notable example.

The dead locoweed, the pest of the cattlemen, is a favorite with the Indians, for the yellow pods of the plant when pulverized serve as spice to render some of the otherwise insipid dishes palatable.

The roots of the cancer root are roasted over live coals, and when young, succulent and nourishing are prime favorites with the red epicureans.

Flowers of the yucca and agave are boiled, dried and preserved, to be eaten as occasion requires. The young shoots or crowns of these plants are also roasted and eaten. Seeds of the Artemisia tridentata or wormwood and the Atriplex lentiformis are pulverized and eaten. Pine nuts form a very important item of food with many of the tribes in the wooded section of the country, and acorns furnish other tribes with a large part of their living.

There are other herbs which are utilized by the Indians as food. Indeed, there are few plants which are not capable of being rendered edible in some manner. There are, however, other things besides plants which are made to satisfy the pangs of hunger. In the animal kingdom are a number of varieties of creatures, not classed in the game list of the white man, which minister to the appetites and needs of the red man.

There are in the southwest, particularly in California, bodies of bitter, poisonous waters known as boracic lakes. Owen's lake, twenty miles long, is of this class. It is a veritable Dead sea, like the sea of that name and its counterpart, the Great Salt Lake of Utah. Its heavy, brackish waters do not support fish or marine life.

At certain seasons of the year the waters of these boracic lakes abound in white grubs known to the Indians of that region as "koochabee." These grubs are the larvae of a two winged fly, the Ephydra californica. So plentiful are these grubs in their season they line the shores of the lake to a depth of several inches, where the waves cast them up from their watery incubator. The Indians at this season of the year camp upon the shores of the lake, gather this peculiar harvest and dry it in the sun. Later the grubs are ground in stone mortars into fine powder, and from this insect meal they bake a bread which is highly prized.

There are a number of other insects—lizards, reptiles and the like—which are used as food by different tribes. The chuckawalla, a lizard somewhat resembling the Gila monster, is a common article of food with Lower California Indians and with some of the tribes north of the line. It may not be the most inviting of foods—some of the insect and reptilian foods are far from palatable—but the Indian is not inclined to quarrel with anything which stops the gnawing beneath his belt, and he evidently believes that "not that which goeth into the mouth defileth the man."—Los Angeles Times.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by C. W. Swartz, Tusseyville; F. A. Carson, Potters Mills.

A SUCCESSFUL MERCHANT

When asked what advice he would give a young man starting out in life said, "To such a question most men will say a man to succeed should possess honesty, integrity, energy, stick-to-it-iveness; but I say with all these he may miss his mark if he neglects his appearance. By all means let him have all these qualities, but let his appearance serve as an entering wedge or he will be long in securing an opportunity to demonstrate the fact that he possesses them."
