Deer Entangled in Wire Fence.

In the village of Baileyville, Friday morning, a deer became entangled in a wire fence and was shot and killed by Dan Irvin. It was a doe, and weighed two hundred pounds. It is presumed the animal was driven from the mountains nearby by hunters.

Hauls Corn in Dead of Night.

It's the same old story, with but a slight variation. The wagon, one horse hitched to it, is drawn up to the fence enclosing a corn field; the corn is carried to it until the bed is filled; the thief drives home.

This happened a short time ago, the field visited being that of Aaron Lutz, on the Bible farm. What about it? Why, it's only one of a series of thefts perpetrated in the neighborhood.

Thanksgiving Day supper.

As is their custom, the members of Progress Grange will give a Thanksgiving Day supper in Grange Arcadia from four to ten o'clock. Oysters, chicken and waffles will be served.

The order is worthy of the liberal patronage of citizens, and it is hoped that many will do so. The proceeds from the supper will be applied to liquidating the building debt.

Employ Evangelist.

At a meeting of the Huntingdon Presbytery held at Tyrone, last week, a committee was empowered to employ an evangelist at a cost not exceeding $2,000 and necessary expenses.

The call of the church at Milesburg for Rev. R. G. McLeon was taken from the table and returned to the church.

The April meeting of the Presbytery will be held at Altoona.

Elmer Hettinger Buys Farm.

The Kerr farm, near Centre Hill, was sold by James B. Strohm, administrator, Saturday afternoon, at a postponed sale, for the sum of thirty dollars per acre. The farm was in two parts—one part, on which the buildings are located, contains forty-eight acres, and the other thirty-two acres. The purchaser was Elmer Hettinger, now tenant on the farm. Another bidder was M. J. Decker.

Governor-Elect a Bachelor.

It is said that Governor-elect Edwin Stuart will not go to Harrisburg before inauguration day, next January, unless something develops requiring his presence. Mr. Stuart is a bachelor, and his sister, Miss Cora Stuart, who at present has charge of his home in Philadelphia, will do the honors at the executive mansion during her brother's term of office. For the first time in over half a century the governor will be a bachelor.

Pennsylvania Day at State.

Friday, November 23, is Pennsylvania Day at Pennsylvania State College.

The speakers for the occasion are Hon. Robert S. Murphy, Lieutenant Governor-elect; Hon. Henry Honck, Secretary-elect Internal Affairs; Miss Kate McKnight, President State Federation Pennsylvania Women; Hon. W. B. Simpson, House of Representatives. Exercises will be held in the Auditorium 10.30 a. m.

Luncheon at McAllister Hall for guests of the College 12.30 to 1.30 p. m.

Review of the Cadet Battalion 2.00 to 2.30. Foot Ball—3.00, University of West Virginia vs. State.

LOCALS.

Consult W. H. Bartholomew & Son, of Centre Hall, for Fire Insurance.

Communion at the Union church, Farmers Mills, was postponed by Rev. D. Gress from last Sunday until Sunday, December 2.

If you want good Fire Insurance placed in cash companies, consult W. H. Bartholomew & Son before placing elsewhere.

Very few persons from Penns Valley went to Harrisburg Saturday. The capitol excursions are played out. What is wanted is to see that the grafters are sent to the pen.

Who would have ever thought that the light from a Centre Hall street lamp would be so bright as to blind a cow drover? But it did. Score one for the borough light department.

Mrs. B. H. Arney accompanied her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. Miles Arney, and two little daughters, to their new home in Niagara Falls, and assisted them in getting their home ready for occupancy.

UNIFORM PRIMARY ELECTION LAW.

Does it, or Does it Not Apply to Boroughs and Townships.

Much is being said about the Primary Election Law which is now in force, but there is not a district in Centre county to which the law applies in nominating candidates to be voted for at the February election.

The candidates for all township and borough offices will be named in the old way. The local bosses—Democrats and Republicans—have not been shorn of their power by the Primary Election Law.

The first primary election to be held under this law will be on the first Saturday in June, at which time the candidates for county offices will be nominated. Members of all parties will vote and make nominations on that day, and the election will be very similar to the regular election, except that each party will have its own ticket.

CONTRARY OPINION.

Contrary to the above, a statement has been issued by George D. Thorn, chief clerk of the State Department, in which it is contended that the Uniform Primary Election law does apply to the Boroughs and Townships. Mr. Thorn's opinion, however, is not a binding interpretation of the new law, and according to his view two sets of candidates could be nominated by each party—one set under the old system and one set under the law now being discussed.

The section of the law bearing on boroughs and townships is as follows: "Provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the nomination of candidates for borough or township offices, or other offices not herein specially enumerated, in the manner provided by existing laws."

Chief Clerk Thorn's statement is as follows:

"County Commissioners through the State are interested in this matter, and there is much diversity of opinion as to whether or not the primaries in boroughs and townships should be held under the provisions of the Uniform Primary act. Section 2 of the Uniform Primary act provides that 'Two primaries shall be held each year in every election district of this Commonwealth.' This is followed later by the above quoted proviso.

If the electors of any borough or township desire to make their nominations for the coming spring election under the new primary act, they should signify such desire and intention by filing with the County Commissioners petitions for nominations. If such petitions are not filed with the Commissioners, no ballots will be provided for use under the new primary law, and the primaries cannot be held under this new law, but will have to be conducted under the old system; that is, in the manner observed before the passage of the Uniform Primary act."

To settle this question will require an opinion from a higher authority than a department clerk.

The underdog may be deserving of sympathy; but don't forget that the small potatoes are always at the bottom of the heap.

RAIN IN PARIS.

It Does Not Dampen the Spirits of the Frenchman.

The sole effect rain seems to have on French spirit is to bring out its brightness by contrast with clouds. "Tiens! Il pleut!" ("Ah, it rains!") And monsieur, dressed with scrupulous care, ready to sally forth, does not stop for an umbrella, probably, but steps out jauntily into the street and makes no more unfriendly comment on the weather than "Il ne fait pas beau ce matin." ("It is not fine this morning.") This is the French point of view.

Discomfort of any sort is for them only the negative of something desirable, and so they keep their minds on that which is pleasing, naming it to define the absence of it. La petite Helene and her little brother Henri, who go to school in the neighborhood, trot along in the rain, the bonne at their heels carrying their school bags. Henri wears a capuchon, a cape with the hood drawn up over his head. Helene holds over her head a minuscule umbrella, which she tilts in such fashion as to make the most of the rain. Unrebuked by any threat of something awful to result if a drop of water falls on them, both children dance along in the wet, letting the drops fall on their upturned faces and laughing in glee as if the rain were another playfellow. Even his royal highness the baby does not miss his accustomed outing on account of the weather.

Nanu, the nurse, will shorten the great ribbon streamers of the white cap she wears, and she slips up her dress to escape the muddy streets. Le bebe himself is resplendent in the laces and feathers which are an inseparable feature of the magnificent devotion which the French bestow upon an infant; he is snugly tucked in his gocart, the hood is raised if it is a heavy downpour—anything less is thought to be good for him—and off he goes.—Harper's Bazar.

LEGAL ADVICE.

A Case Where Proceedings in Court Were Unnecessary.

Two or three Chicago lawyers were discussing the tricks of their trade. "A big, burly fellow from the Michigan pine forests came into my office," said one of them, "and told a very mean story about a rich man here in town who was trying to cheat him out of $2,000 or $3,000, and who had managed to get a pretty tight clutch on the money. The backwoodsman looked and talked like an honest man, and the old miser's reputation was mean enough to match the story, so I felt inclined to believe it. When he had finished I looked him up and down from head to foot. He asked me what I was looking him over for. 'Well,' said I, 'I was thinking that if I were over six feet tall and as powerful a man as you I wouldn't hire a lawyer to help me get that money.' The man's excited face smoothed out into blank astonishment. 'What do you mean?' he said. I answered: 'I mean just what I say. You are sure, are you, that he has that money in his office?' 'He had it there last night.' 'Well, you don't need a lawyer.'

"The man turned on his heel and left without another word. In a day or two he sent me a check for $50 and his thanks for my advice."

STRENGTH OF CHARACTER.

It Combines Power of Will and Power of Self Restraint.

Strength of character consists of two things—power of will and power of self restraint. It requires two things, therefore, for its existence—strong feelings and strong command over them. Now, it is here we make a great mistake. We mistake strong feelings for strong character.

A man who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble and the children quake, because he has his will obeyed and his own way in all things, we call a strong man.

The truth is he is a weak man. It is his passions that are strong. He that is mastered by them is weak.

You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feelings he subdues, not by the power of those which subdue him, and hence composure is often the result of strength.

Did we never see a man receive a flagrant insult only growing a little pale and then reply quietly? This is a man spiritually strong.

Or did we never see a man bearing a hopeless, daily trial remain silent and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength.

He who, keenly sensitive, with many powers of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet restrain himself and forgive—he is the strong man, the spiritual hero.

Felted With Epithets.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the most famous temperance advocate in England, was the target of the political wits. During his last campaign for parliament Sir Wilfrid was greeted as a "peregrinating pump handle," "an old cracked teapot," "a confisicatory molly-coddle," "a washed out water party," "a pop bottle pump orator," "the apostle of slops," "a maudlin mountebank" and "a buffoon." The last epithet was so often hurled at Sir Wilfrid that he remarked it reminded him of "Selah" in the Psalms. His hatred of war and rum led to an epigram which has frequently been repeated. "The country," he said, "is governed by two heathen deities—Bacchus and Mars, or, in other words, by the god of bottles and the god of battles."

Painting and Drawing.

Sir Frederick Leighton once supplemented words of advice and encouragement to a struggling young artist by handing him an envelope containing a check for $250, with the remark, "One day, my friend, I do not doubt that you will be able to draw even better than this." This reminds one of the anecdote told of the visit of old Joseph Gillott, the pen man, to Turner. "I have come to swap some of my pictures for yours," he said. "What do you mean?" exclaimed Turner. "You don't paint?" "No, I don't, but I draw," said Gillott, unfolding a roll of Bank of England notes, "and here are some of my pictures."

Mutual Satisfaction.

"What's this I hear about the plumber and the paper hanger in the next block? Have they been trading houses?"

"Not exactly. They did a lot of work for each other and each had to take the other's house for his pay."—Chicago Tribune.

Willing to Compromise.

A young woman called at a house where a maid was wanted. She asked the mistress of the house if she had any children, to which she replied that they had five. "Then I can't work for you," said the girl. "Oh, do stay," said the woman. "We will kill the children!"

If a man has his board fence painted white it immediately suggests to the boy a piece of charcoal; if black, a piece of chalk.

PRESCRIPTIONS.

A Medical Explanation of Why They Are Written in Latin.

The use of Latin by physicians in prescription writing is commonly regarded as a harmless survival of medievalism. Occasionally a lay writer suggests its abandonment. In commenting on a recent note to this effect in a daily paper, which advocates the compulsory use of English in prescriptions, the Druggists' Circular and Chemical Gazette takes occasion to make a strong defense of the time honored practice. Says this paper:

"Suppose the sapient writer quoted, whose utterances may sound all right to those who know no more of his subjects than he does, should fall sick and his physician should decide that the one thing needful to save his life was Geranium robertianum. If there were a law preventing the doctor from prescribing in Latin he would have to choose one of the upward of a dozen English names for this drug. Suppose he chose 'redshanks' and so wrote the word in his prescription. When the druggist went to prepare the medicine he would find that 'redshanks' was the English name of at least four entirely different plants—namely, the one already mentioned, Polygonum amphibium, Polygonum persicaria and Rumex acetosa.

"As with redshanks so with hundreds of other drugs. Aaron's beard may be Cotinus cotinus, Cymbalaria cymbalaria or Saxifraga sarmatosa. Of snakeroots there are numberless kinds. Suppose the English writing doctor wanted to be sure of getting the right kind, so specified black snakeroot. Then is the druggist to dispense Cimicifuga racemosa, Asarum canadense or Sanicula marilandica?"

LINGERING COLD.

Withstood Other Treatment But Quickly Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"Last winter I caught a very severe cold which lingered for weeks," says J. U. Quhart, of Zephyr, Ontario. "My cough was very dry and harsh. The local dealer recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and guaranteed it, so I gave it a trial. One small bottle of it cured me. I believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best I have ever used." This remedy is for sale by

BUY OIL FROM THE BARREL.

Don't pay $1.50 a gallon for canned oil, which ought to cost but 60 cents a gallon. Ready-mixed paint is half oil and half paint. Buy oil fresh from the barrel, and add it to the L. & M. paint which is semi-mixed.

When you buy L. & M. paint you get a full gallon of paint that won't wear off for 10 or 15 years, because L. & M. Zinc hardens the L. & M. White Lead and makes L. & M. paint wear like iron.

4 gallons L. & M. mixed with 3 gallons Linseed Oil will paint a moderate sized house.

Actual cost L. & M. about $1.20 per gallon.

Sold in the north, east, south and west.

C. S. Andrews, ex-Mayor, Danbury, Conn., writes, "I painted my house 19 years ago with L. & M. Looks well today."

BILLIENESS AND CONSTIPATION.

"For years I was troubled with billieness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my testal force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I would have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The tablets relieve the billieness at once, strengthen the digestive functions, helping the system to do its work naturally."—Mrs. Ross Potts, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by

OLD FRENCH BONFIRE.

Probably the strangest detail recorded of the old midsummer eve bonfires is one in connection with those that used to be lighted in the Palace de Greve in Paris. The main constituent of the bonfire was a tree, which the king was accustomed to fire with his own hands, the ashes being afterward carried home by the people for good luck. Louis XIV. was the last king who did his part. A mysterious item of earlier times was the burning in the bonfire of a barrel, bag or basket full of cats. The registers of Paris show that a hundred souls were paid to an official for having provided during three years (1571-73) "all the cats required, as usual, for the fire," and also in one year, when the king was present, "a fox, to give pleasure to his majesty and for having provided a great bag of linen in which the said cats were."—London Chronicle.

SIXTEEN MILES UNDERGROUND.

The most remarkable canal in the world is the one between Worsley and St. Helens, in the north of England. It is sixteen miles long and underground from end to end. In Lancashire the coal mines are very extensive, half the county being underground. Many years ago the managers of the Duke of Bridgeport's estates thought they could save money by transporting the coal underground instead of on the surface; therefore the canal was constructed and the mines connected and drained at the same time.—Pearson's Weekly.

A WISE SON.

"A dislike," said the gentle philosopher, "should not lead us to any active demonstration. We should merely seek to avoid its object."

"Maybe my boy Josh has more sense than I gave him credit for," rejoined Farmer Cornloss. "That's exactly the way he feels about work of all kinds."—Washington Star.

AN EXPERT STATEMENT.

"Is there any sure way of knowing when a man is meaning to propose?" asked the bud.

"You needn't worry about that," said the belle. "The knowledge comes by nature. The most important thing is to know when he isn't going to."

POLITENESS OF CHILDHOOD.
