

TORTURED WITH GRAVEL.

Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills Not a Single Stone Has Formed.

Capt. S. L. Crute, Adj. Wm. Watts Camp, U. C. V., Roanoke, Va., says: "I suffered a long, long time with my back, and felt draggy and listless and tired all the time. I lost from my usual weight, 225, to 170. Urinary passages were too frequent and I have had to get up often at night. I had headaches and dizzy spells also, but my worst suffering was from renal colic. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I passed a gravel stone as big as a bean. Since then I have never had an attack of gravel, and have picked up to my former health and weight. I am a well man, and give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for it."

Wanted To Know.

The hero of a story which has been told of Archbishop Ireland is really that witty churchman, Bishop Talbot, "the cowboy bishop," whose powers of repartee and whose churchly devotion made him famous among those people of whom he has so delightfully written in his reminiscence volume, "My People of the Plains."

"Where in—have I seen you?" demanded a rough-looking man, meeting Bishop Talbot one evening in the crowded single street of a mining town.

To which the Bishop suavely retorted, to the shouting delight of the bystanders:

"What part of hell do you come from, sir?"—Life.

Keep Your Blood Pure.

No one can be happy, light-hearted and healthy with a body full of blood that cannot do its duty to every part because of its impurity; therefore, the first and most important work in hand is to purify the blood so that every organ will get the full benefit of a healthy circulation. There is no remedy we know of so good as that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills. Each pill contains one grain of the solid extract of sarsaparilla blended with two grains of a combination of pure and mild vegetable products, making it a blood purifier unexcelled in character. One or two taken every night for awhile will produce surprising results.

Brandreth's Pills have been in use for over a century and are sold in every drug and medicine store, plain or sugar-coated.

NO RELIEF FOR 15 YEARS.

All Sorts of Remedies Failed to Cure Eczema—Sufferer Tried Cuticura and is Entirely Cured.

"I have had eczema for over fifteen years, and have tried all sorts of remedies to relieve me, but without avail. I stated my case to one of my friends and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I bought them with the thought that they would be unsuccessful, as with the others. But after using them for a few weeks I noticed to my surprise that the irritation and peeling of the skin gradually decreased, and finally, after using five cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment it disappeared entirely. I feel now like a new man, and I would gladly recommend these remedies to all who are afflicted with skin diseases. David Blum, Box A, Bedford Station, N. Y., Nov. 6, 1905."

POTTERY OF VEGETABLES.

CUPS AND SAUCERS FASHIONED FROM THE PULP OF PLANTS.

Peculiar Ware Used in East—Astringent Fruits Boiled Until They Have the Plastic Properties of Clay Without its Fragility.

The use of the dried fruits of trees, such as the gourd and the cocconut, for holding water and liquid substances is familiar, but it is not so generally known that cups, saucers and jars to take the place of ordinary earthenware are made in the Orient of a glutinous and plastic material entirely of vegetable origin, which is easily moulded and dried. Says David Hooper in a communication to the Asiatic Society, of Bengal, India, quoted in the National Druggist:

"There is more than one instance in history of vegetable matter being confuted with earth or clay. . . . The pulpy parts of various astringent fruits have the peculiar plastic property of clay, and by hardening in the air, after being moulded into pots, they are impervious to water, and have the additional advantage that they can fall to the ground without being broken.

"The use of the fruit of the aoula for making pottery was described in 1896 in a letter from Mr. James Martin, written from the Tumgaon district, Raipur, Central Provinces, to the reporter on economic products to the Government of India. He writes: 'I have come across a peculiar ware that is made by the Banjaras of the district from the fruit of the aoula (Phyllanthus emblico). The fruit is collected and dried. It is then boiled in water until quite soft and pounded, the stones removed and the pulp beaten up and worked with the hands into a thick, darkbrown, sticky mass. When this is quite ready the manufacturer takes an earthen vessel—any shape that pleases him—and covers it all over with a thick layer or coat of the pulp. This is then put aside to set a bit, and, when hard, rude devices are stamped round the neck and shoulders of the article, which is then set aside to dry. When quite hard, the gharra inside is broken and the pieces removed. These vegetable pots are sold according to size from 4 annas to 8 annas each, and are much sought after by the people of the place. Oil and ghee stored in them are well preserved and show no evidence of rancidity.'"

The aoula tree, we are told, is abundant throughout the forests of tropical India and Burma, and the fruits are frequently employed in medicine and for tanning. The advantages which the fresh pulp possesses for preparing vessels are recommended by the author for more extensive trial, and he suggests that probably other fruits could be similarly utilized. To quote again:

"Another material used in making jars is the root of the great asphodel (Eremurus aucherianus, Boiss). The fleshy root of this plant, by drying in a sand bath and grinding, is prepared into a flour, which, when mixed with hot water, yields a most tenacious vegetable glue with which the Persians make great vessels for holding oil and clarified butter. The native cobblers employ it in preference to animal glue in their work. Dr. J. E. T. Atchison describes the method of making these vessels in Persia: 'The tenacious gum is painted over a hollow earthen mould that has a single layer of some coarse cloth covering it; on this cloth, layer after layer of the glue is painted until a sufficiency is reached; this forms, when dry, a parchment-like skin, the mould is then broken up and removed through the mouth of the jar, and then usually the jar is sewn into a goat's hair sack. With ordinary moisture, or the amount of moisture likely to affect the jar through the goat's hair covering, no harm is likely to accrue, but if the jar is allowed to stand in water for days it will in time dissolve or melt away.'

"Sarish-narm is the name of the flour made by grinding down the dried roots of Eremurus with the intention of converting them into glue. Sarish-kaki is the vegetable glue ready made for use. Daba-i-sarish are the vessels made in the above manner. There is said to be a large trade in this material in Khorasan."

ASK THE HEN.

Chicago Doubts if Chickens Are Like Poets.

"Is a spring chicken born?" was the question that came up to puzzle the wise heads at the hearing before Master in Chancery Kelly to determine the legality of the city's seizure of frozen poultry from the Northwestern Cold Storage Warehouse.

Leon Hornstein, Assistant Corporation Counsel, was cross-examining F. A. Becker, commission merchant and the owner of the condemned poultry. "You say the price of poultry in January," asked the attorney, "is lower than in the early spring?" "Why, certainly, it is," replied the witness.

"And it is then," read the stenographer, "that the spring chicken is born?"

"I object to that," put in Attorney Dudley for the defence. The objection was overruled. "I don't know," said the witness, "but I should not say that a chicken is born."

"Chickens are made and not born, then," said the Assistant Corporation Counsel.

"Rather," replied the witness, "they are hatched out."

"Make the correction," ordered the master.

"Now, the eggs that they are hatched from," continued the attorney, "are they cold-storage eggs?"

The witness cast a look of pity at the lawyer in his struggle after knowledge.

"No," he replied kindly, "chickens usually are hatched from fresh eggs."

This did not conclude the examination, as many other things were gone into. The yellow corpse of the cold-storage rooster that had been thawed out during the night in water was again passed from nose to nose.

The lawyers and the witnesses and the reporters sniffed. Then the master gingerly held the exhibit under his own nose.

"I don't know," he said judicially: "the proof of the chicken is in the eating; but I don't know as I'd care."

"Will you accept an invitation to a frozen chicken dinner to be given Friday night at a restaurant?" asked Mr. Becker. "It is the best stuff in the world."

"I'll render a decision later," said the master.

Chief Food Inspector Murray, who likewise has received an invitation, regretted that a previous engagement will prevent his acceptance.—Chicago Post.

The Point of View.

So much depends upon the viewpoint of the reader, or listener, that we can not always be sure that the full meaning of what is written or said, will be understood.

General Lew Wallace, when he was Minister to Turkey, was requested by Chekuk Bey to tell him how American children were raised. General Wallace said: "We keep our children outdoors all the time possible. They live under the trees and in the sunshine. They gather nuts and wild fruits. They play baseball and ride young horses. They go to school without servants, and the girls and the boys study in the same classes. The boys are taught to till the soil or work in shops or stores. The girls do housework and fit themselves to become wives and to have children. The children sit at the same table with father and mother. They are taught to be polite and to love God."

Chekuk Bey listened attentively and said he would translate this to his secretary and have him write it down, as it was very interesting. The following translation is what finally got into the Turkish state document, according to The Boy's World: "American children are kept in the warm sun all the time, living like heathen under the sky. They have trees for homes. Their food is nuts and un-tanned fruit, which they eat without cooking. They capture wild horses and play a strange game with a ball, the name of which can not be given. As they have no servants they are sent to school, and indecently the boys and the girls sit in the same room and look upon each other's faces. They do not respect women. To keep the boys subject to their masters, they are made slaves, and work land, while the girls are servants in the kitchens until they can work no more, and then they are married off. They show no respect to father and mother, since they eat with them. They love a strange god, and are polite, but the meaning of the last word is unknown."

We are hoping for a clearer understanding of our meaning by the readers of the Home Circle than General Lew Wallace met with from his Turkish confere.—The Circle.

Look For the Beautiful.

Some one said that we are saved by our admirations. Our characters are certainly molded by our ideals. The man who holds an admiration-ideal, so to speak, who finds something good, something to admire, in everybody, is infinitely superior to the one who holds a critical ideal, who is always looking for ugliness, deformity and inharmonious.

Nothing else so hardens character, so demoralizes manhood and womanhood, and so utterly precludes the possibility of upward growth, as the deadening habit of fault-finding, of criticizing. As a rule, we find what we seek. If we look for light and beauty,—if we try to find something to admire and praise in others,—we shall find it. On the other hand, if, like the hog, we root in the mire, seek something filthy, keep constantly on the watch for the faults, the unlovely qualities in others, we shall find what we seek. But we must remember that whatever we are looking for, whatever we are striving to find, will color and influence our characters; in other words, we shall become like what we strive and yearn for. So, if we wish to become beautiful and strong, in mind and body, we must seek symmetry, beauty, nobility,—all that is vigorous and elevating,—continually, in nature and humanity.—Success.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents' and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

The Eternal Feminine.

The fashionable woman on Fifth Avenue and Broadway this season is a sartorial paradox. You cannot tell by looking at her whether it is summer or winter, raining or fine, morning or afternoon. Her head, which you might take to be reasonably warm under its natural protection of mountainous pompadour, she covers with a heavy fur hat—cap, a pound or so of feathers and flowers and a lot of little false curls. Over all these she sometimes ties a long, thick automobile veil. What for?

Her poor little ankles, however, are left completely out in the cold. She wears her skirts quite as short as she dares, her shoes as low as her dancing pumps, and between these two points there is a stretch of bare skin showing through very openwork stockings.

About her neck she wraps several yards of lined and wadded fur; but her arms from her wrists to her elbows are bare save from a thin covering of suede kid gloves. From her waist line up she is usually in the tightest and warmest of fur jackets, while about her limbs blows a light-weight, much-pleated skirt, which appears to be mainly intended to let in the breezes. She carries a huge 1830 muff, large enough for Gulliver's hands, but the soles of her shoes are of paper weight.

The burning question is, when she is comfortable about the feet and skirts, how does she feel with all that blanket on her head and shoulders? And when she is just warm enough about the head and shoulders, isn't she aching with cold at the other extremity? Or is it, after all, only a case of mental gymnastics?—N. Y. Press.

CRIED EASILY.

Nervous Woman Stopped Coffee and Quit Other Things.

No better practical proof that coffee is a drug can be required than to note how the nerves become unstrung in women who habitually drink it. The stomach, too, rebels at being continually drugged with coffee and tea—they both contain the drug—caffeine. Ask your doctor.

An Ia. woman tells the old story thus: "I had used coffee for six years and was troubled with headaches, nervousness and dizziness. In the morning upon rising I used to belch up a sour fluid regularly.

"Often I got so nervous and miserable I would cry without the least reason, and I noticed my eyesight was getting poor.

"After using Postum a while I observed the headaches left me and soon the belching of sour fluid stopped (water brash from dyspepsia). I feel decidedly different now, and I am convinced that it is because I stopped coffee and began to use Postum. I can see better now, my eyes are stronger.

"A friend of mine did not like Postum, but when I told her to make it like it said on the package, she liked it all right." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Always boil Postum well and it will surprise you.
