ANOTHER GIFT FROM

The Philanthropic Scot Celebrated New Year's Day by Donating Threequarters of a Million to Provide a Home in Washington for the Pan-American Union.

Washington (Special) .--- It was announced at the White House Friday that Andrew Carnegie has given $750,000 for the erection of a building in Washington for the Bureau of American Republics. The United States government and the various American republics have South agreed to purchase the site.

Mr. Carnegie was at the State Department, and was in conference with Secretary Root, who is chairman of the board of governors of the bureau. Secretary Root informally thanked him for his gift, and indicated that he would at once send him a formal letter of acceptance. President Roosevelt already has written Mr. Carnegie expressing his appreciation and acceptance of the donation.

The gift having been made to the Bureau of American Republics, the permission of Congress to accept it will not be necessary. Several years ago Congress appropriated $200,000 ward the site and building for the bureau, and between $20,000 and $30,000 already has been contributed by the South and Central American countries belonging to the bureau.

Mr. Carnegie's Letter.

Mr. Carnegie's letter offering the gift is addressed to Secretary Root, as ex-chairman of the governing board of the Bureau of South American Republics, and reads as follows:

"I am greatly pleased that you and your colleagues of the South American republics have done me the honor to suggest that I might furnish a suitable home in Washington for the Bureau of American Republics,

'The approval of your application by the governing board of the international bureau and President Roosevelt's hearty expression of satisfaction are most gratifying.

You very kindly mention my membership of the first Pan-American Conference and advocacy of the Pan-American Railway, the gaps of which are being slowly filled.
