

DEATHS.

JACOB RHONE.

Sunday morning death claimed Jacob Rhone at his home in Allegheny, where he was living retired. His age was sixty-six years. The body was shipped to Centre Hall Monday, and funeral services were held from the residence of Hon. Leonard Rhone, a brother, Wednesday morning, interment being made in the Tusseyville cemetery. Rev. J. M. Reaick was the officiating minister, Mr. Rhone, during his lifetime, having been connected with a church of the Lutheran faith. Death was due to neuralgia of the heart and was very sudden.

The deceased is survived by a wife, nee Miss Catharine Fye, daughter of David Fye, of Pine Grove Mills; also, one son, Waldo, who is engaged with the Westinghouse Electrical Company, Pittsburg. Besides Mr. Rhone, at Centre Hall, four sisters survive: Mrs. Emily Sankey, Potters Mills; Mrs. John Hess, Pine Grove Mills; Mrs. Lewis Mason, Grinnell, Iowa; Mrs. John Kickson, St. Joe, Missouri.

Previous to the Civil War, Mr. Rhone was a student at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, but when Lincoln's call for men came, he enlisted for a term of three months, at the expiration of which time he re-enlisted and served until the close of the war. He was a member of the 56th Pennsylvania Volunteers and in a company captained by Mr. Jack, of Boalsburg.

When peace came, Mr. Rhone returned to college and later graduated from Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg. He afterward took up the study of law, and graduated from the Albany Law University, Albany, N. Y. For a number of years he taught the Pine Grove Academy, and today many of his students are foremost in business or professions in the localities in which they live. Later Mr. Rhone located in Missouri, where he remained until he retired, at which time he came to Allegheny.

JOHN STOVER.

Just two days after having passed his sixty-third birthday, John Stover, of Unionville, died Friday of last week. Interment was made Sunday morning at Unionville. He is survived by a wife, nee Miss Kate Alexander, and three children. Surviving brothers and sisters are Rev. S. Charles Stover, Meyersdale; Adam Stover, somewhere in the west; Mrs. Lizzie Root, Buffalo Cross Roads; Mrs. Elmira Hingston, Kansas.

Mr. Stover was a farmer by occupation, and death was due to paralysis.

MISS ELIZA PUFF.

Miss Eliza Puff died at the home of Christian Platt, Farmers Mills, Friday of last week. Interment was made Sunday in the Union cemetery, Rev. Fenstermaker officiating. Her age was eighty years and some months. Death was due to the ravages of age.

Mrs. Margaret E. Cole, relict of the late Edward Cole, died at her home at Pleasant Gap, after an illness of several weeks duration. She was born July 17th, 1836, and was thus past seventy years of age.

James I. DeLong died at his home in Blanchard, aged seventy-three years, fifteen days. He is survived by a wife and six children.

Joseph Brungard, of Sugar Valley, died last week. Interment was made at Loganton. His age was seventy-one.

The Snow Storm.

A fierce snow storm raged for an hour Tuesday evening shortly after seven o'clock. The snow fell in granular form, and with such rapidity and force that the bravest shrank from weathering it.

In the western part of the state a similar snow was experienced, and while at its height there was a vivid flash of lightning and a loud peal of thunder.

LOCALS.

No rogue e'er felt the halter draw With good opinion of the law.

Harry E. Bilger, of Bellefonte, and Miss Laurena C. Wimer, of Pine Grove Mills, were married in Lock Haven on February 28th, by Rev. F. W. Schwefer.

Miss Tillie Kelle, assistant postmistress at Centre Hall, has been ill during the past week, and consequently not able to attend to her duties in the post office.

Mrs. Alfred Catherman and little son, of Millmont, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Slack, at Old Fort. Mrs. Catherman and Mr. Slack are brother and sister.

Ex-Treasurer W. T. Spear, of Bellefonte, is undergoing treatment at St. Luke's Hospital, Philadelphia, for an ailment from which he has been suffering for a long time.

On account of an injury to his ankle received while working on a lumber job near Laurelton, Samuel Wilson is now at his home at Millheim. He must, however, locomote by the aid of crutches.

When J. F. Coleman, the farmer for Dr. Hoy, in College township, went to the barn one day last week, he discovered that one of his horses had committed suicide by hanging. Several days later he found another of the animals dead in its stall.

About thirty-six hours after birth a child born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glasgow died Saturday at the home of the mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Klinsfelter, near Tusseyville. The mother was in a very delicate condition but she is improved somewhat at this time.

G. H. Osman, proprietor of the Osman restaurant, at Jersey Shore, was awakened the other morning by a colored man standing over him with a meat cleaver in his hands with evident intentions of killing him. "I've come to kill you," said the negro, who was an employe of Mr. Osman. By some means Osman managed to stay action by the negro, telephoned for a policeman, and had the man placed in the lock-up.

E. M. Huyett, the lumberman, expects to stable a large number of western steers to feed for the June market. Lew Gettig, the Bellefonte butcher, has been delegated to make the purchases in Buffalo. The Huyett farm is directly under the management of Perry Luse, who no doubt will turn out some fine finished stalled animals just at the time the market is at the top notch.

90th Anniversary.

Aunt Jane Knof-ker, as she is familiarly known at her home in Spring Mills, Wednesday celebrated her ninetieth birthday.

Life the Mythical Dragon.

In the Malay archipelago is a reptile much like the mythical dragon. It has fangs like those of the cobra and also fangs like those of the rattlesnake. It is also a frog with spreading feet that makes a parachute which enables it to flit from tree to tree, and a flying lemur that can spread out its whole body like an umbrella and leap and fly a hundred feet at a time, from the top of one tree to another.

Gold and Silver Gospels.

"The Gold and Silver Gospels" is the name of a very peculiar book now preserved in the Upsala library in Sweden. It is printed with metal type on violet colored vellum, the letters being silver and the initials gold. When it was printed, by whom or what were the methods employed are questions which have great interest for the curious, but have never been answered.

A Choice of Evils.

Landlady—Would you advise me to send my daughter to a cooking school or to a music school? Boarder (reflectively)—Well, I think I'd send her to a cooking school. It may be more fatal in its results, but it isn't anything like so noisy.

NAPOLEON.

The Courtesy of the Famous Exile on the Undaunted.

In George Cruikshank's Omnibus, a short lived periodical edited by Laman Blanchard, is a slight sketch entitled "A Short Cruise at Margate," in which we get a glimpse of Napoleon Bonaparte during his voyage to Elba. The author relates how he interviewed an old Margate boatman named Emptage, who had served on the Hyacinth man-of-war under Captain (afterward Admiral) Ussher and on the Undaunted in Frejus bay when Napoleon embarked from that port for Elba. The article is illustrated by two drawings by Cruikshank, in one of which Napoleon is represented leaning against the breech of a gun and in another as pursued by a bluejacket at Toulon, where, as Emptage declared Napoleon related, he was wounded by a British sailor.

In conversation Emptage states that Napoleon on coming on board the Undaunted went forward and conversed with the sailors in what he calls a sort of lingo, which may have been Italian or French, or perhaps a mixture of both. It is certain that Napoleon did not speak English, although he knew enough of that language to read the naval and military news in an English newspaper. Emptage's tale is corroborated by Admiral Ussher, who published a narrative of the voyage to Elba, in which he says:

"On arriving alongside I immediately went up the side (of the Undaunted) to receive the emperor on the quarter deck. He took his hat off and bowed to the officers, who were all assembled on the deck. He soon afterward went forward to the forecabin among the people, and I found him there conversing with those among them who understood a little French."

It seems evident that Napoleon took pains to ingratiate himself with the crew of the Undaunted during the voyage from Frejus. Lord Rosebery relates:

"When he (Napoleon) left the Undaunted, which conveyed him to Elba, the boatswain, on behalf of the ship's company, had wished him long life and prosperity in the Isle of Elba and better luck next time."

The good wishes of the crew were probably stimulated by the very liberal present Napoleon made on leaving the ship.

The article in the Omnibus, which appeared in 1842, describes Emptage as approaching his seventieth year and as having been several times wounded.

I remember Emptage well. He was very popular with visitors to Margate, and one of his admirers presented him with a fully equipped sailboat, which he called the Old Friend, on which I have frequently sailed out to the Goodwins and back—London Notes and Queries.

Brahms as a Barbarian.

Brahms was a hearty eater and particularly fond of Italian cookery. One day he and Dr. Billroth, the eminent Austrian surgeon, visited Herr Wichmann in Rome and were invited to a breakfast alla romana. The host's cook, Mora, did her prettiest, and the wine supplemented her efforts. Brahms' thoughts were on the viands he had just enjoyed. In jovial humor he raised the question whether it was not his duty to take back with him to Germany a wife who could provide so admirable a meal as Mora. Finally Wichmann, with mock seriousness, presented himself to Mora as a suitor for her hand in behalf of a great German artist. "Moreover, he is a musician," he explained, "and you surely are fond of music, for you sing about the house all day. What say you?" Mora's answer was classic. She looked at Wichmann, then at Brahms from top to toe and, with an energetic gesture, replied, "Sono romana, nata al Ponte Rotto, dove sta il templo di Vesta, non sposero un barbaro." ("I am a Roman, born near the Ponte Rotto, where the temple of Vesta stands. I never will marry a barbarian.")

Jefferson's State Dinners.

Jefferson was a methodical man, keeping account of all his expenditures, and the yellowed accounts kept while he was in the White House show that he spent $12,000 for liquors alone during his term of eight years. Notwithstanding the low prices, Jefferson often spent as high as $50 on his small dinners, wine list not included, and he was most particular about his wines and brandies. Jefferson's state dinners were usually limited to about forty guests. The large dining room was not considered finished, so when his guests were numerous he had a long table placed in the center of the great east room, and dismal enough it must have been, with its bare walls, many windows and drafts, and insufficient light from the candles, which dropped wax tears at the every wind which blew up from the Potomac. No wonder Jefferson and several of his successors looked forward with dismay to the state affairs and cheerfully to the informal dinners.—Home Magazine.

How Servin Dines.

Table manners amount to very little among the Servians. There is a perfect babel of conversation, the band shrieks and groans and wails, and amid the din the waiters hurry hither and thither. Some aggressive looking Servian, with a waist belt full of pistols and knives, will swagger ceremoniously up and down the room. Officers of the local garrison form a group at another table, their smart uniforms a strange contrast to the medley of the others. Anon they become uproariously intoxicated and sing national songs to the music of the orchestra, while mine host, seated on a raised chair at the end of the room, beams affably upon his guests.—R. L. Jefferson in Wide World Magazine.
