

METHODIST APPOINTMENTS.

Central Pennsylvania Conference Adjourned Tuesday. Rev. G. W. McInay Returned to Penna Valley Charge.

The Central Pennsylvania Conference adjourned Tuesday after an interesting session. Following will be found the appointments of the Altoona district in full, and the location in other districts of ministers known to the Reporter readers:

Much to the gratification of the Penna Valley charge, Rev. G. W. McInay was returned to his former field. It is only fair to say that the pastor, as well as the people in his charge, is pleased with this result. From all points of view, Rev. McInay has been successful in his field of labor.

DEATHS.

GOTTLIEB D. ARMBRUSTER.

Just about three months after the death of his brother George, Gottlieb D. Armbruster died Saturday, at his home at Farmers Mills. His age was sixty-one years, seven months, 26 days. Interment was made Wednesday morning, at the Union cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Gress, pastor of the Reformed church. The interment was according to the beautiful and impressive rites of the Order of Free Masons, the deceased having been a member of that order for many years.

Mr. Armbruster is survived by a wife, nee Sarah Neese, and the following children: Mrs. Harvey Rossman, Spring Mills; Mrs. Clement Luse and Mrs. George E. Heckman, Centre Hall; William, Kingston, Illinois; Grace and Mattie, at home, and Mrs. Dorothy Helms, Altoona.

One brother, Christian Armbruster, of Minerva, and one sister, Mrs. Aaron Long, also survive. Mr. Armbruster was of German descent, and for many years lived in the neighborhood in which he died. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

CHARLES BRUCE GARMAN.

At the age of twenty-five years, Charles Bruce Garman, manager of the Garman House, Bellefonte, died Saturday morning. Death was due to an affection of the heart. He was a son of the venerable Daniel Garman, and was quite popular among the many who knew him.

Five years ago he was married to Miss Sabra Campbell, who survives him.

The Rain in the Woods.

The lamentable effects of the general destruction of forests are now sufficiently recognized in all civilized countries. Such destruction invites devastating floods in mountain streams and causes the surrounding land to dry up. Forests act like vast condensing screens. They preserve a moist atmosphere about them, attenuate the force of torrential downfalls, promote a more gradual melting of the snow in early spring and protect the soil against too rapid evaporation. And yet the manner in which forests act their beneficent part is not exactly such as might be supposed. They prevent a large part of the rain that falls from reaching the soil at all. It is estimated that in European climates the forests evaporate directly or transpire physiologically four-fifths of the rain that falls upon them. Thus the forest atmosphere is no less important than the forest soil in equalizing the climatic conditions of a country.—Youth's Companion.

Tale of a Coat.

The clawhammer, or evening coat, has many oddities of cut. These oddities were once essentials. There was, in fact, a time when every idiosyncrasy of the clawhammer served some useful purpose. The cutaway front of the coat, for instance, was originally cut away so that the wearer when on horseback would not be incumbered. The two buttons at the back were for fastening up the tails out of harm's way, each tail having in the past a buttonhole at its end. The sleeves, with their false cuffs, are relics of the days when sleeves were always turned back and therefore were always made with cuffs that unbuttoned. The collar, with its wide notches, is a survival of the old collar that was notched in order that its wearer could turn it up conveniently in cold or stormy weather. The dress coat, in a word, is a patchwork of relics—relics once essential, but now of no use on earth.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Webster's Fine Talk to a Fish.

I had a chat once with old John Atquin, then a patriarch among the few survivors of the Mashpee Indians. He had often been Mr. Webster's guide and companion on his fishing trips and remembered clearly many of their happenings. It was with a glow of love and admiration amounting to worship that he related how this great fisherman, after landing a large trout on the bank of the stream, "talked mighty strong and fine to that fish and told him what a mistake he had made and what a fool he was to take that fly and that he would have been all right if he had left it alone."

Who can doubt that patient search would disclose somewhere in Mr. Webster's speeches and writings the elaboration, with high intent, of that "mighty strong and fine" talk addressed to the fish at Mashpee?—"Fishing and Shooting Sketches," by Grover Cleveland.

A Literary Tragedy.

When Carlyle had finished the first volume of his great work on the French revolution he lent the manuscript to his friend John Stuart Mill. One evening soon afterward Mill entered Carlyle's door, pale as Hector's ghost, with the dismal information, gasped out in almost inarticulate words, that with the exception of about four or five sheets the manuscript was completely annihilated. Mill had left it too carelessly lying about, and a servant, thinking it so much waste paper, had burned it. Five months of steadfast, occasionally excessive and painful toil utterly lost! For three weeks Carlyle could do nothing but read Marryat's novels. Then one night, sitting talking to his cook, he decided it should be written again and eventually finished "such a task as I never tried before or since."

Ruskin's Opinion of Mrs. Carlyle.

Ruskin spoke with scornful amusement of such mistaken enthusiasts as wished to enroll Jane Welsh Carlyle among the martyrs, on account of her "man's" bad temper. He admitted that Carlyle was frequently grumpy and habitually melancholy—"but so am I"—and he was easily irritated. "That clever shrew," his wife, well knew this and by the very tones of her voice as she "rasped out his name" could set his nerves on edge in a paroxysm of febrile irritation.—Scribner's.

Not in His Business.

"You fellows may find it all right," said the man in the corner of the smoking compartment, "but in my business I can't take peep." As I find them.

"What is your business?" asked the man whose suit case was covered with labels. "I'm a photographer."—Cleveland Press.

Electricity.

Said a young student to a professor of physics at Columbia: "I had a good laugh on a friend of mine last night. He confessed that he did not know what electricity was." "Then it's up to you to laugh at me," was the answer. "I don't know either. Who does?"

Do Not Crowd the Season.

The first warm days of spring bring with them a desire to get out and enjoy the exhilarating air and sunshine. Children that have been housed up all winter are brought out and you wonder where they all came from. The heavy winter clothing is thrown aside and many shed their flannels. Then a cold wave comes and people say that grip is epidemic. Colds at this season are more dangerous than in mid-winter, as there is much more danger of pneumonia. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, however, and you will have nothing to fear. It always cures, and we have never known a cold to result in pneumonia when it was used. It is pleasant and safe to take.
