Monday Alternoon on Earm Owned by Mrs. John Shook at Spring Mills.

Monday afternoon between the hours of three and four o'clock the small barn on the farm of Mrs. Kate Shook, widow of John Shook, of Spring Mills, was totally destroyed by fire. The buildings are located about one-eight of a mile east of C. P. Long's store, and are those on the farm formerly owned by Lewis Waltz. The farm is tenanted by William Smith, who began farming last Spring. How the fire originated is not known, but there is no inclination to make it appear that it was of incendiary origin.

The loss to the tenant is quite heavy, owing to the fact, as stated above, that he just began farming operations, and includes one calf, two hogs, chickens, the whole of his meat supply which was stored in the granary, and all the farming implements. One horse was also badly scorched, but it is thought he was not permanently injured.

The barn, which was rather an old structure and not very large, but adequate to accommodate the cattle and crops, is a total loss. Neither the tenant nor landlady carried insurance. At some stages of the fire the dwelling home in which Mr. Smith, the tenant, lived, was thought to be in danger of being consumed by the flery elements, and a rush was made to remove the household goods. As is usually the consequence in such cases much of the property was damaged or destroyed by hasty thoughtless persons whose intentions were of the Jonas Bible Surprised. Thursday evening quite a number of friends and neighbors wended their way to the home of Jonas Bible, near Centre Hill, where they assembled in honor of Mr. Bible's birthday. The affair was planned by Mrs. Bible and daughters, Misses Bertha and Nellie, and was so successfully carried out it until the guests had arrived. A very pleasant evening followed. Mrs. Michael Smith presided at the organ of familiar songs. Delicious and palatable refreshments were served, and relatives. were much enjoyed. Mr. Bible was highly pleased with the remembrance of esteem. Those present were: Fos-Mr. and Mrs. Wagner, of Brush ter Frazier and family, Charles Miller, son Edgar, Wm. Lee and wife, Wm. Compulsory Vaccination Remains in Force.

The anti-vaccination measure was vetoed by Governor Stuart The reappointment of Commissioner Dixon was almost a positive assurance that there would be no radical change in the health laws of the State. In vetoing the measures the Governor stated:

Vaccination is a preventive measure and it would afford little protection in any locality after small pox is known to exist therein.

This bill vetoed, the vaccination law stands the same as heretofore.

Not a Mind Reader.

A grocer in a nearby town happened around when a farmer was unloading several boxes filled with groceries which he had ordered from the department store. The groceryman asked the farmer the price of the articles purchased and then told him that he could sell them just as cheap. The farmer then said: "Is that so? I take the home paper, but you seldom, reader."

Bills Vetord

Governor Stuart vetoed a number of bills during the past week. Among these are :

The anti-vaccination measure. The measure permitting owners of improved land through which streams run to take fish-except game fish-a legal way at any time.

The measure providing for the state to build bridges over navigable streams.

HISTORIC DRAMATICS.

The Passion For Acting That Asserts

Itself In Man. Some psychologist has asserted that the instinct in many men, great or small, that leads them to pose in order to give dramatic effect to their words or actions has at times been so strong as to be unconquerable, even by death. History records an amusing instance of this in the case of Sir Francis Burilett, who was condemned to the Tower for high treason. Sir Francis resisted the order. His house was attacked by detachments of cavalry and infantry.

An infuriated mob raged outside. When the door was broken down, Burdett was found calmly seated in his library, an infant son upon his knee, whom he was teaching to read Magna Charta.

William Pitt, perhaps the greatest of British orators, was, according to Grattan, "an incomparable actor." Pitt would seize upon every trifling occurrence with the rapidity of lightning which could add force to his eloquence. It is related that on one occasion when attacking a Radical motion late at night the lights of the house went out. Pitt paused, and then in the darkness his voice rang out:

"Go on! If the constitution must be wounded, let it receive its mortal stab now in this dark and midnight hour!" Action on the motion was postponed and finally lost. One of Pitt's opponents afterward said:

"He made us feel like conspirators doing a bloody deed simply by the lack of candles and his marvelous voice." Pitt was fully aware of the effect of this. He once solemnly began a speech upon colonial reforms by the words, "Sugar, Mr. Speaker"- when he was Interrupted by a smothered laugh from some of the younger members. He paused, glared from bench to bench and then in a white heat of fury cried out "Sugar! Sugar! Sugar!" three times.

So powerful were the tones of the orator that a frightful silence followed. He looked at the awestruck members and said contemptuously, "Who laughs at me and sugar now?" and went on with his speech.

On another occasion, while hurling contempt at Lord Effingham, he suddenly appealed to a figure in the tapestry on the wall as "an immortal ancestor of this degenerate lord, indignant at the disgrace of his race and country." So fine was the action, we are told, that the house thrilled with excitement, only remembering afterward that the "great shade" whose wrath upon the canvas. The passion for acting could go no further than in a duke of the great French house of Rohan, who, being told that he had only helf an hour to live, caused himself to be taken up, dressed in court costume, with all his orders and jewels, and seated in the Finding himself growing blind, he rose, exclaming, "Ah, the King is here!" saluted and fell dead. Napoleon, according to his biographers, possessed dramatic talent of no low grade. Indeed, it has even been asserted that he took lessons of the celebrated player Talma. At any rate, the Corsican on no occasion lost sight or an action. How the devoted legions must have thrilled when under the shadow of the pyramids he delivered to them his "Soldiers, from these pyramids forty centuries look down upon Famous Loving Cups.

Some of the old loving cups were called grace cups. Of the specimens and corporations the most famous is the Henry VIII, grace cup, which belongs to the Barbers' company of London. With its four globular bells hanging around the outer rim, says the Jewelers' Circular, this cup might well excite the envy of even the most honest collector of silverware. The name of the cup is derived from the fact that King Hal was the donor, the grace cup being intended to commem orate the union of the barbers with the guild of surgeons. The cover carries the Tudor rose, portcullis and fleur-delis, the finial of the lid being mounted with the imperial crown, the English and French arms being beneath, supported by the lion and greyhound,

The Skinners' company has a peacock cup, though it is in the form of a peahen. This large silver bird, with three chicks at her feet, stands on the silver badge, which was formerly worn by the company's barge master, and around it are the engraved words, "The gift of Mary, ye daughter of Richard Robinson and wife to Thomas Smith and James Peacock, skinners, 1642." The lady's two husbands were both masters of the company.

Court Fools Who Owned Whole Towns. Hitard, who was attached to Edmund Ironsides, is the first court jester of whom we have record. He owned the town of Walworth, a gift from the king. He held it through four succeed. ing reigns, and before leaving England or never, advertise. I am not a mind | for Rome, where he spent his last days, he presented it to the church, placing the deed upon the altar of the Cathedral of Canterbury. Gallet, Galet or Gollet, a native of Bayeux, was one of William the Conqueror's jesters. He was attached to William when only Duke of Normandy and saved his master's life by disclosing a plot for his assassination. Berdie was another. He lator regis and lord of three towns, all rent free, and five carucates in Gloucestorselve. Part of the contract of the later remedy. For sale by tershire. Rahere was jester to Henry I. and William Piculph or Picol jester to King John. Master Henry, who, it is thought, may be identical with Henry of Avranches, the poet laureate or versificator, was jester to Henry III.
