The groom is a plasterer by trade, is an industrious young man, and before marrying had a house all ready furnished in Altoona into which to move and begin housekeeping. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lutz, and for several years has been employed in the Commercial Telephone exchange.

Trim the Shade Trees.
By the way of suggestion the Reporter remarks that a number of shade trees in Centre Hall need trimming. The distance between the walk and overhanging limbs should be seven feet. No town within the county has as many pretty shade trees as has Centre Hall, but it is necessary to keep the trees trimmed and shaped up so that they look their best. Young shade trees, just planted, should be trimmed so that they will have at least a seven foot stem.

Nine Mills for School Purposes.
The school board was obliged to increase the millage for school purposes from seven and one-half to nine mills, or one and one-half mills. This increase was necessary owing to the passage of the new minimum salary act which applies to the present school year, but does not make the appropriation available until the school year of 1908-1909.

The school board is in no way responsible for the increase in the school tax.

Blacksnake for a Pet.
The following is from the Lewistown Democrat and Sentinel: Bert Shimp the possessor of a unique pet in the shape of a huge blacksnake, measuring five feet, ten inches in length, which he captured alive some time ago and now keeps caged. The reptile shows a fondness for any one monkeying too close to the cage by trying to tickle them with its ugly looking fangs, but Bert hasn't taught it to feed from his hand yet.

Hoag-Doyle.
The marriage of Charles Alvin Hoag, an architect, and Miss Margaret May Doyle, both of Pleasantville, New York, occurred Monday July 1st. The bride is a niece of Mrs. D. L. Kerr, of Centre Hall, and when a child spent much of her time in Centre Hall with her grandparents, the elder Willows. They will be at home at Pleasantville after September 1st. During the time intervening the couple will visit Centre Hall.

Alfalfa.
The alfalfa crop on the plot sown by the writer in May, 1905, was cut and cured the later part of June. The four acres yielded about six good two-horse loads, about thirty per cent more than last year. The growth was quite luxuriant, many of the stalks having attained a length of from three to four feet. Two more cuttings are looked for this season.

LOCALS.
You have it (the Reporter) again after a week's vacation.
Charles Burris has been ill at the home of his father, west of Centre Hall.

Does any one now doubt why Quay selected Samuel W. Pennypacker to be Governor?

Byron Garis, who at present is doing masonry work in and near Milroy, was home for a short rest last week.

Miss Eliza M. Moore left last week for a visit to relatives at Lemont and State College. She will be gone a month or more.

After suffering for several weeks from rheumatism, Mrs. Isaac Smith, of Centre Hall, is improving somewhat, but is not yet able to be out of bed.

Miss Flo Duck, a teacher in the Waldo Emerson high school, in St. Louis, is at her home in Spring Mills, where she will remain during her vacation.

A new dyeing machine is being installed in the knitting mills in Millheim, says the Journal. These mills are in a very flourishing condition and are very ably managed.

With a view of having a continuous supply of greens for his laying hens during the winter months, A. E. Kerlin, the senior partner in the Grand View Poultry Farm, Centre Hall, is caring for 1400 cabbage plants, recently set out.

Among the sons of Aaronburg who are making progress in the classic world is Dr. J. W. Bright, a member of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. His alma mater, Lafayette College, just conferred advanced degrees upon the Doctor.

The State College Water Company and the Pennsylvania State College authorities have parted ways. The College management claims the water company attempted to overcharge them, and as a result the college is pumping its water from an artesian well.

P. Gross Yearick, of Philadelphia, is at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. B. Mingle, in this place. Mr. Yearick is one of the firm of Yearick Brothers, extensive coal dealers, and when at home is closely confined to his place of business, which all the more makes him enjoy a season of country life.

"A Missioner's Reminiscences" is the title of a booklet being published by Missioner R. Crittenden. Rev. Crittenden has had forty-two years experience in mission work, having served that length of time in Northern Central Pennsylvania for the American Sunday School Union. The book will be well worth the price asked—75 cents in paper binding and $1.00 in cloth.

The Hagens have completed their work in Centre Hall and are now erecting a dwelling house and out-buildings at Coburn for Warren Corman. The Hagens crew of carpenters, all of whom are hustlers, are Messrs. John, Harvey and William Hagen, Scott Stover, Amos Dunkle and Frank Waite. They formed a combination several years ago, and are all skilled workmen.

In order to obtain the benefits of the purest mountain air, Howard Fetterolf came home from Pittsburg and will remain here until he regains his former good health. For a year or more he had been working in brass in one of the large shops in Pittsburg, and seemingly for a long time he was able to withstand the poisonous gases and fumes, but later he began to feel the ill effects of his surroundings.

According to John R. Strong, the Potters Mills taxidermist, it will take a lawyer and judge to keep the average sporting man within the bounds of the game laws. The local game warden found a mounted robin and woodpecker among Strong's collection, and in order to save paying the penalty for violating the laws, Mr. Strong was obliged to go before a justice and make oath that the birds had died from some unknown cause.

A recent issue of the Phillipsburg Daily Journal contained this bit of news: Prof. John S. Hosterman went to Greensburg to attend a meeting of the State Educational Society. From there he will go to Lancaster and join his wife and child in a visit to Mrs. H's parents. He will shortly proceed to New York City to take a special course in the Columbia University, returning to Phillipsburg with the opening of our schools on September 1st, to resume his position here.

There are a few of them, but they exist, and miserable creatures they must be—the habitual borrowers of their neighbors home paper. As a rule, and in all cases that could be cited by the editor of the Reporter, the borrowers are abundantly able to pay for a hundred weeklies annually, and the people imposed on are poor, but not niggardly mean. Then again, the constant borrowers usually denounce the paper they are too stingy to pay for, but read every line that is in it and complain if they can't read it first handed. This little note ought to be worth the price asked by the publisher, and especially when the borrower knows that the lender has the contentment for him as has the publisher, but oftentimes the lender is not in a position to express his feelings.

LANDING A BIG FISH.

The Joy and the Labor of Catching an Amber Jack.

PLUCK OF A FINNY FIGHTER.

In the Duel Between the Angler and Battling Beauty There Is No Lull in the Fierce Conflict Till One or the Other Is Victorious.

The boatman is telling us of certain catches he has seen when, like an electric shock, comes the sharp staccato of the click. There is no mistaking it; no tide rip here. And see! Look! The line stiffens, straightens out like a wire, trembles a second, throwing the water in crystal drops, and then the reel screams, high and low, as the unknown jerks the line away in long and splendid bursts of speed.

There is always the thought that it may be a shark or a ray or some not desired vermin, but you have taken the amber jack before and its sturdy cousin of the California island, and there is no mistake about it.

Springing to your feet, with the butt of the rod firmly in the leather socket around your waist, you see what a game fish can do, what splendid strength he brings into play as he races away, dragging the line from beneath your thumb and the heavy brake, seemingly playing with it.

Fifty, 100, 200 feet of line slip away before the fish is stopped, and then it appears to strike heavy, determined blows at the rod, sweeping around in a splendid half circle, the line cutting the water and the fish rising with a peculiar motion.

Amber jacks have been hooked here that no man could stop. In the language of the boatman, "they simply walked away with the line," then when the end came never stopped, and there is seemingly no limit to the powers of this fellow.

The angler has a start, the thumb brake of leather stops the run, and the big reel begins the pitiless work, and while the jack races he is insensibly coming in all the time. More than once he realizes this and plunges down and if the water is deep enough sulks and bores like a salmon and with ten times its force. But the water is comparatively shallow, and the game can only break away and dash off fifty feet, to be checked again and again. But it never really surrenders, never really discovers that it is in the toils. Like its cousin, the California yellowtail, it fights until it is in the boat, and even then I have seen a fish double and send itself whirling out of a barrel into the freedom of the sea.

The angler can now see the jack as it races around the boat, and the black boatman fingers his gaff ready to give it the quietus. Nearly thirty minutes have slipped away, and the attempts of the oarsman to keep the angler stern first to the fish and the powerful rushes have carried the boat out from shore where the fish has plenty of water. The man at the rod begins to feel that he has earned his fish. In boxing, "let up," time for rest, but in this duel with the amber jack it is all one round, and arms and fingers are stiff and ache. Pressing the thumb on a leather pad for half an hour, holding a stiff rod in one position is deadly, and the amber jack appears to have taken his second wind. Perhaps there is a third wind for amber jack, as, suddenly, when coursing along at the surface, he apparently sees the boat and goes crazy, plunging down to the mad acclaim of the reel, tearing off the hardy won line and carrying despair into the angler's soul.

But this is the beginning of the end, and, holding the rod and line firmly, the angler dips the point to the surface and lifts, "mans the pumps," lifts for all he is worth, gains three feet on the sulkier, then, dropping the tip, reels rapidly, and so, ever repeating the trick—the only remedy when fishes will sulk—he regains his lost line and has the splendid fish in sight again. There is a flash of silver, yellow and green, a display of surface below the resilient rod, then the reel works it on the quarter, and as the patch of color surges hissing along the negro gaffer drops his weapon quietly, skillfully under the fish and lifts him just under the gills, holds him firmly for a moment while the spray and spume fly. Then, depressing the rail, he slides the gallant fighter in, where he hammers the bottom as the angler perchance swings his hat to some distant and less fortunate friend still at anchor. These are the moments of joy in the life of the angler, and surely life is not a failure along the gulf stream and is worth living.—Forest and Stream.

An Artist's Slip.

Sir John Gilbert was once commissioned to illustrate a short story for a London weekly. When he had finished the work, the editor remarked, "Why, Mr. Gilbert, the story says an escort of infantry soldiers, and here on the block you have given us mounted ones." "Dear me, so I have," responded the artist, "but I haven't time to do another drawing now. Can't you make an alteration in the story to make it fit in?" The copy was handed to a subordinate to make the requisite alterations, but that gentleman forgot to edit the chapter describing how the soldiers had gained the summit of a steep mountain, parts of which they were obliged to scale with ladders. Horses could not have been got there unless by the assistance of a crane. Afterward shoals of letters from subscribers wished to know how the cavalry got there.

PHILADELPHIA'S GREAT WEEK

July 15 to 20, when the Elks hold their Annual Reunion in Philadelphia, will be a glorious week in the Quaker City. Not for years have such elaborate preparations been made to honor the City's guests as those which are now being made to welcome members of the Order, and to entertain the thousands who are expected to visit the city during the week.

A grand Court of Honor in Broad Street, the most magnificent structure of the kind ever erected in America, and costing $50,000, will be a great feature of the occasion. Every night during the week this Court of Honor, together with the City Hall, will be illuminated by myriads of electric lights of various colors.

On Wednesday, July 17, a massed band parade of over 2000 musicians will take place.

On Thursday, July 18 the Grand Parade of all visiting Elks will occur. Over 15,000 men from all sections of the country will participate. Each Lodge will have its own band and will wear a distinct uniform. Each uniform will typify the state or city represented by the lodge. Many of the uniforms will be historical and picturesque.

On Saturday, July 20, there will be a grand excursion to the seashore. Atlantic City, Cape May, Wildwood, Ocean City, Asbury Park, and other popular resorts are within easy reach of Philadelphia by the fast express of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Excursion tickets to Philadelphia will be sold July 13 to 17, inclusive, at reduced rates from stations over 100 miles from Philadelphia.

For exact fares and conditions of tickets, consult nearest Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent.

Best Medicine in the World for Colic and Diarrhoea.

Last spring it seemed as though I would die, and I think I would if I hadn't taken Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I haven't been troubled with it since until this week, when I had a very severe attack and took half a bottle of the twenty-five cent size of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and this morning I feel like a new man."
