

DEATHS.

Mrs. Michael Segner died at her home in Boalsburg Thursday morning, July 4th, after a lingering illness of several years' duration.

The deceased's maiden name was Christina Louise Bart. She was born in Wittenberg, Germany, April 25, 1847, and in company with her mother, came to this country when but nine years of age.

On October 13, 1870, she became the wife of Michael Segner. To their union were born eleven children, ten of whom, together with the husband, survive.

The children still living are: Levi, State College; Charles, Boalsburg; Sophronia, wife of Jared Mayes, Watsonburg; Ellis, wife of John Gingrich, Boalsburg; Esther, wife of Edward Zong, Oak Hall; Irene, Dorsey, Viola, Francis and Claude, at home.

Mrs. Segner was a member of the Lutheran church at Pine Grove Mills. Her funeral took place Saturday morning, the discourse being delivered in the Lutheran church, Boalsburg, by her pastor, Rev. H. Bergstresser, assisted by Rev. J. I. Stonecypher.

B. FRANK BROWN.

After a lingering illness of a dropsical nature extending over a period of several years, B. Frank Brown died Monday, July 1st, at his home at Colyer, aged forty-nine years.

Interment was made the following Thursday, in the Evangelical cemetery, Zion Hill. The officiating minister was Rev. Hanney, of Spring Mills.

The deceased is survived by a widow, whose maiden name was Agnes Young; also two sons—Boyce and Frederick.

JAMES KRADER.

As a result of a general collapse of the physical body, James Krader died at his home near Green Grove church, Gregg township, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Krader was aged about seventy years, and is survived by a wife and four children, all residents of near Penn Hall, the latter two being inmates of the parental home.

Children's Day at the Reformed Church.

The Sabbath school of the Centre Hall Reformed church celebrated Children's Day in an appropriate manner the other Sunday. A specially prepared program was used in which were combined songs, recitations and exercises by the smaller children and singing by the school.

The Jamestown Exposition.

Governor Edwin Warfield, of Maryland, speaking of the Jamestown Exposition said:

"I visited the Centennial in Philadelphia in 1876, the Columbia Exposition in Chicago in 1893, and the St. Louis Fair in 1904, and I can say without exaggeration that the Jamestown Exposition is superior to them all, from any standpoint. The architecture and natural beauty of the Exposition is without a parallel.

"The Honor of a Cowboy" in Grange Arcadia, Saturday evening.

Festival Saturday evening, July 20, by the members of the Methodist church.

In this issue J. E. Lindsey, of Colyer, advertises horses, cows, sheep and pigs, at private sale.

Rev. R. F. Fetterolf, of Sellingsgrove, advertises for sale in this issue a brick dwelling house at Spring Mills, the property of the late Elias Fetterolf.

The installation of Rev. Barry, the new pastor of the Bellefonte Lutheran church, will take place next Thursday evening.

Rev. A. A. Parr, of Lock Haven, and Rev. Barry, of Hartleton, father of the pastor to be installed, have been chosen to officiate upon this occasion.

Among the arrivals from the west recently was Mrs. George Musser and daughter, Mrs. Ramsdell, wife of Dr. Deyo Ramsdell, of St. Joseph, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Musser left Penn Hall, where they kept hotel, about forty years ago, and located near Orangeville, Illinois, and engaged in farming.

Mr. Musser died a few years ago, and since Mrs. Musser has made her home with her daughter. Mrs. Musser's maiden name was Condo, and while here visited the Condos at Penn Hall, the Heckmans, at Spring Mills and Centre Hall, the Dales, at Dale Summit, and the Mussers, at Pine Grove Mills.

This was Mrs. Ramsdell's first trip to the east, and the sight of the mountains more than pleased her.

Smith, the Photographer.

W. W. Smith, the Photographer, will be in Centre Hall Friday, July 12.

His "Right" Name.

From queer names and descriptions of things there follow as a natural sequence queer names and descriptions of people. Among a number of racy instances is one quoted by Mr. Fox-Davies, the well known authority on nomenclature, from Blackwood's Magazine, of April, 1842.

"In one of the Buchan fishing villages a stranger had occasion to call on a fisherman of the name of Alexander White. Meeting a girl, he asked, 'Can ye tell me fa'r Sunny Fie lives?' 'Filk Sunny Fite?' quoth she. 'Muckle Sunny Fite?' said he. 'Filk muckle Sunny Fite?' 'Muckle lang Sunny Fite?' 'Filk muckle lang Sunny Fite?' 'Muckle lang gleyed Sunny Fite?' shouted the exasperated man. 'Oh, it's Goup-the-Lift ye're seekin'; answered the girl, 'and fa'the de'il fo' dinna ye speer for the mon by his richt name at ance?'"

High Game and Fools.

"Never eat game high," said an antiquary. "People will tell you that high game is tender. What rot! Of course it is tender, but would you want your steak or your chop spoiled in order that it might be a little softer to the teeth? No, never! Highness in game is an anachronism, a relic of the past, a relic of the days of stage coaches. In those days it was impossible to deliver game to the cities fresh—transit was too slow. All game was high, and men ate it high because otherwise they couldn't eat it at all; hence to eat game high nowadays, when there is no necessity for it, is to be a fool."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Buddha's Six Essentials.

Buddha, who reformed the Hindoo religion more than 500 years before Christ, established for men six essentials of perfection—first, knowledge, used to distinguish the true from the false; second, energy, which is used to fight against the evils of the flesh; third, purity; fourth, patience; fifth, charity (i. e., loving kindness); sixth, almsgiving.

A Hard Crack.

"Well," said he, anxious to make up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in this parcel?" "Not very," replied his wife indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world." "Ah, I suppose it's those new collars you said you needed."—Tit-Bits.

AMERICAN GOLD COINS.

Why They Do Not Bear the Effigies of the Presidents.

On Oct. 31, 1791, the senate of the United States appointed Messrs. Morris, King, Cabot and Henry a committee to report a bill for the creation of a mint. Seven weeks later Mr. Morris reported a bill to establish a mint and to regulate the national coinage.

The senate debated the bill Dec. 26 and 27 and Jan. 2, 3, 4, 5, and again Jan. 9. On the last named day there was a proposal to place upon the obverse of the silver and copper coins a design of clasped hands and linked chains, emblematic of the union of the states, and upon the reverse the figure of Justice bearing the scales, but it was defeated.

On Jan. 12 the bill passed the senate with a provision that the coins bear upon one side the head of the president of the United States for the time being, with an inscription to express the initial letter of his Christian name and his surname in full, together with the "succession of the presidency numerically expressed." On the other side were to be an eagle and other devices.

This bill came to the house Jan. 13, 1792, and was referred to the committee of the whole. On March 24 the bill came up in committee of the whole, and an amendment was proposed striking out all that looked to the impressing of the president's effigy and name upon the coins and providing in lieu of it an emblematic head of Liberty with the word "Liberty."

This amendment brought on a debate in which a good many members took part, the men who afterward called themselves Republicans or Democratic Republicans in favor of the amendment, the Federalists mostly in opposition. One member objected to the president's head on the coinage as savoring of the practices of monarchies, which had taken this method of handing down to the ignorant the names and succession of their monarchs. The Scriptural phrase, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, unto God the things that are God's," was recalled.

It was argued on the other side that the proposed effigy was a proper tribute to Washington, to which a member responded that, while every one might be glad thus to honor the great man then president, there might be future presidents whose heads the people would not care to see upon the coins.

After the question had been ridiculed by one Federalist as too trivial for so much waste of time and the amendment had been seriously urged in speeches orate with references to Roman history the question was divided, and the house voted, 25 to 22, that the name and effigy of the president should not appear upon the coins. It was then voted, 42 to 6, that the emblematic figure of Liberty should be substituted for the design proposed by the senate. Two days later the bill as amended passed by a vote of 32 to 22.

On the very same day the senate returned the bill to the house, with notice of dissent from the amendment. The house was not pleased at this prompt action of the senate. As the sessions of the latter body were secret in those days and very briefly reported in the published official "Annals of Congress," the nature of the debate in the senate is unknown.

There was more discussion in the house this time, with further denunciations of all signs and symbols of royalty. Mr. Mercer thought it would be well to have in the house of representatives some such rule as that of the British house of commons forbidding the mention of the sovereign's name in debate, and Mr. Page said he would rather cut off his right arm than sign the mint bill without the house amendment.

The house voted in favor of its amendment by a vote of 24 to 22, and next day, March 27, 1792, the senate recessed from its disagreement.—New York Sun.

Clergymen and Shoes.

A pretty girl was buying a pair of shoes. "No," she said, "this pair won't do. They pinch. I must have a size wider."

The salesman was an elderly man, and he took a fatherly liberty in commending her determination to sacrifice her price for the sake of greater comfort.

"As a matter of fact," he went on, "it is all nonsense to think that women as a sex are peculiarly vain of their feet. I have been in this business for twenty years, and it is my experience that men are just as likely as women to discard shoes that are too small for them."

"Take clergymen. Of all persons, whatever men or women, they show the greatest vanity when it comes to buying a pair of shoes. The clergymen I have fitted in the course of my life I can number by the score, and with only a few exceptions they have all shown the greatest willingness to submit to discomfort if only their feet can be made to appear smaller. They will struggle and tug and get red in the face to squeeze their feet into shoes that nature never intended them to wear. Take my word for it, no woman could possibly be more vain of her feet than is the average clergyman."—New York Press.

Final Advice.

"Now, James," says the old physician to his son who has returned from medical college and is about to set up for himself, "there is just one piece of advice I will give you, and if you follow it you cannot fail to be popular and successful."

"What is it, father?" "Tell every woman that she needs a change of scene, and tell every man that he is working too hard."—New York Life.
