The sale of the real estate of the late Lydia Ann Foust has been postponed until Friday, November 8th.

Preserving the Roof.

Did you ever notice moss growing on some shingle roofs? The moss-covered roof will last but a short time, the growth serving to keep the shingles moist at all times, and the consequence is decay. The roofing may be preserved by carefully removing the moss and applying air-slaked lime. Of course this will not restore a decayed roof, but if this precaution is taken when the moss begins to appear, it will be of good service.

A lengthy argument was had in the matter of the petition of sundry citizens of Miles township for the re-establishment of the Harter School in said township, petition having been presented sometime ago to the court by citizens of said school district asking to have this school re-established and an inspector was appointed, who reported in favor of the re-establishment of the school. The directors of the township not having done so a rule was granted on four of them to show cause why they should not be removed from office for non-compliance with the report. The case was argued, but no decision given as yet.

A Runaway.

Miss Bessie Grove and sister, Mrs. Zettle, experienced a runaway Monday evening while on their way from the Grove home to Spring Mills. They were driving the family horse, but on reaching a point below Edward Grenoble's the buggy passed over some obstacle that frightened the animal, which started to run at a breakneck speed. After a half-mile's speeding the horse was pulled into a fence corner, where he tore loose from the buggy.

The occupants were unharmed, but greatly frightened as the road they passed over was lined by unprotected embankments, and had the horse side-stepped for a few feet the whole outfit would have been precipitated into the creek, twenty feet below.

There is a possibility that proceedings for criminal negligence will be instituted against the Gregg township supervisors, according to a statement made by the Reporter's informant.

WORK OF THE TAXIDERMIST.
One of the much appreciated corners of the exhibit building was that occupied by the work of taxidermist John E. Strong, of Potters Mills. The display consisted of a number of birds and animals that looked much as though they were yet alive. The work was much admired and attracted the attention of everyone who entered the building.

THE STATE COLLEGE EXHIBIT.
J. P. Pillsbury had charge of the splendid exhibit of Pennsylvania State College, which occupied one wing of the large exhibit building. The exhibit covered a wide range, and was one worth the farmer's time to study. Cereals, their yields through a succession of years; grasses, etc., formed a part of this display. The effect of barn yard manure on grasses was another feature demonstrated. It only took a glance to see the great value of this fertilizer, which is most recklessly handled by the average farmer. Work from the mechanical shops was also visible, showing the exactness of the work done in that department by the youths who are striving to become the mechanics of the future day. To please the ladies, an elaborate display of potted plants formed the center of the wing devoted to the college display. Many of these were sold to the lovers of flowers.

OLD RELICS.
The list of Old Relics and names of the exhibitors will appear next week.

LOCALS.
Clover seed and second crop hay are being cut.

From Mountain View, Oklahoma, the home of S. J. Krader, come newspapers filled with accounts of Democratic county and state victories. No doubt Mr. Krader imagines himself back again in good old Centre county, where Democrats had full sway when he was a resident of Georges Valley.

Farmers are getting back into the old notch. October used to be the month during which raising potatoes and cutting corn was the program. For the past fifteen years this work was done largely in the month of September, but this year they are back to the old way. And it is not the farmer's fault.

Theodore Brown, son of Nathaniel Brown, of Spring Mills, is now the stenographer in the Pennsy freight department at Milton. He expects to be transferred to the ticket department in a few weeks. Teddy is making rapid strides in the Pennsy Company, and it is possible that in the future he may become Theodore Brown, president P. R. R. Co.
