A REFINED WOMAN SLAIN IN A SWAMP

Well Dressed Man Seen Fleeing From the Scene.

YACHT FIGURES IN THE MYSTERY.
Nude Corpse of Unknown Comely Woman of 30 Years, of Scrupulous Toilet and Fine Raiment, Found Frozen in Pond in Hackensack Meadows Near Newark, N. J.

Newark, N. J. (Special).—A murder, combining the elements of mystery and deliberate cruelty, was committed on the Hackensack meadows in the town of Harrison, and the nude body of the victim, a comely woman of perhaps 30 years, was found nearly submerged in the icy waters of a little pond. Only the feet projected when a chance passer-by broke the ice in which the exposed portions were incrustated and dragged the body ashore.

The dead woman was finely featured; her hair and nails gave evidence of a recent and scrupulous toilet, and such of her clothing as was subsequently found suggested in texture and style an owner of refinement, rather than one whose habits might lead her to frequent the vicinity of the crime. The pond in which the body was thrown is made by the overflow from the Prassic River and is directly across the river from this city.

The body has not been identified, and it is pretty well established that it is not that of a resident of this city or Harrison. Its description does not correspond with that of any woman reported to the police as missing.

Two men, who occupied a yacht moored near where the body was found, are detained by the police, but the most important clue obtained was furnished by Peter Coogan, a watchman employed by the Marine Engine Company, who recognized the body as that of a woman whom he had seen crossing the meadows in company with a man. Later he saw the man alone. He then carried a bundle in his arms. The man was short and stout. Coogan, whose duties keep him in the neighborhood of the meadows, told the police:

"While outdoors at 2 o'clock A. M. I saw this woman in company with a man cross the meadows, going in the direction of the pond. They passed so near me that I was able to recognize the woman's features. Sometime later, perhaps an hour, the man returned and again passed me, this time going in the direction from which the two had come when I first saw them. This time the man was alone. In his arms he carried a bundle which he did not carry when first seen. In build he was short and thick set. Coogan could not give a better description of the man."

Two girls returning to their home in Harrison long after midnight heard a woman's cries floating over the marsh land. They seemed to come from the direction of the pond, and to the startled girls sounded like "Spare me!" and "Help!" Nearer home the girls were approached by a well-dressed stranger, who accosted and followed them until a policeman was met with, when he turned and fled.

The girls had a good view of the man under an electric light, and while he was well and neatly dressed, his hands showed either that he was accustomed to manual labor or had recently been engaged in work that soiled his fingers.

Life had been extinct, the coroner said, about 12 hours when the body was found. A mark on the neck indicated that strangulation was the manner of death. Scratches on the leg and trunk and pieces of cinder forced into the flesh showed that the body had been dragged along a cinder path which skirts the pond.

Along the path the police picked up a white silk waist, slashed up the back, a skirt and a pair of silk garters. Following the path the police came upon the yacht Idle Hour, which was tied up at a point on the Passaic about 300 feet from where the body was found. On the yacht the police say that they found a sealskin muff and a fur neck piece.

The occupants of the yacht were Albert Thompson, 41 years old, of Elizabeth, a boatman, and Frederick Kirkman, 38 years old. Both were employed on the boat. Thompson said that he found the fur piece near the cinder path. The police found on the boat dishes enough for three dinners. There were three plates, three saucers, and so on. The men, however, said that they had no visitor on the Idle Hour. Both were arrested as suspicious characters.

SERIOUS WRECK ON THE PENNSYLVANIA

Four Persons Injured and Property Loss Heavy.

Pittsburg, Pa. (Special).—Four persons were injured, heavy property loss was sustained and three tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad were blocked for the night by two wrecks near Bolivar, Pa., 58 miles east of here, at 7 o'clock P. M. Extra freight train No. 3084 left the rails of Track No. 1 because of a broken rail, it is believed, and 20 cars were smashed and piled up over tracks Nos. 2 and 3.

Almost immediately after the accident to the freight, No. 18, known as the Chicago mail, running at high speed to make up lost time, reached the point on track No. 2, and plowed over the debris with terrific force. Every person on the train was badly jolted and shaken up, many of the passengers being thrown from their seats.

None of the passenger cars left the tracks, but a number of the windows were broken and several persons were cut by flying glass. At the office of the company here it is stated that one mail clerk was severely bruised and bumped by being thrown against the side of his car and that three passengers were more or less cut and bruised. No one on the freight train was injured.

The mail train consisted of five mail cars, two express cars and three day coaches, drawn by two locomotives. The front locomotive was almost completely demolished.

After a delay of three and a half hours the passenger train was run back to the first crossover, transferred to No. 4 track and continued east. All of the injured remained on the train.

The tracks under the freight wreckage are thought to be considerably damaged. The freight cars were all loaded and the loss is heavy.

BARS SECRET WEDDINGS.
Couples In New York Must Now Get A License.

New York (Special).—Hitherto it has not been necessary for couples to secure a marriage license in order to be married in this state. Beginning with the New Year the new law suggested and approved by Governor Hughes will go into effect.

The new bureau for the issuance of licenses to persons to be married was opened at the city clerk's office, in the city hall. The new law provides that the intending bride and bridegroom shall appear at the bureau and apply for the license, or "affidavit to marry," as it is called. No matter who the parties may be, rich or poor, official or layman, they must answer the questions put to them in order to obtain the license. Then they may go where they please to be married.

The corporation counsel delivered an opinion that the city clerk might issue licenses before the year 1908 began, when the law goes into effect, so that those intending to be wed on New Year's Day might get their licenses ahead of time.

THRILLING RESCUES.

DR. RIXEY TAKES A FIRM STAND

Medical Officers For Command of Hospital Ships.

VERY SERIOUS BREACH EXISTS.

Surgeon General Maintains That It Is Doubtful If the Geneva and The Hague Agreements Could Guarantee Neutrality of Hospital Ships If Combatant Officers and Crew Were Aboard

Washington, D. C. (Special).—The resignation of Rear Admiral Willard H. Brownson from the office of chief of the Naval Bureau of Navigation because President Roosevelt overruled his objection to placing a naval surgeon in command of a hospital ship, is not likely to end the controversy between the line and the staff of the naval service involved in this incident. Admiral Brownson's protest was the breath applied to a smoldering flame, and those who have known of all the trouble that has been brewing for a long time realize that the matter cannot be adjusted without much discussion and the distribution of some hard knocks.

Coming right on top of the publication of Henry Reuter's attack on the bureau system of the Navy Department, the controversy between Admiral Brownson and Surgeon General Rixey assumes a very important and far-reaching aspect. It has served to call attention to the differences that exist between the bureaus of the Navy Department and to demonstrate the need of a more harmonious administration. Nothing more is needed to attract the attention of Congress to Mr. Reuter's strictures, and when the Senate and the House reassemble after the holidays there is bound to be a thorough airing of the causes which have operated to bring about conditions which naval officers themselves are anxious to remedy.

Surgeon General Presley M. Rixey issued a statement in which he touches upon the circumstances leading up to the probable selection by the President of a medical officer to command the hospital ship Relief over the protest of Rear Admiral Brownson. While disclaiming exact knowledge as to the cause of Admiral Brownson's resignation, the Surgeon General's statement leaves little room for doubt that the controversy he reviews was a potent factor.

Surgeon General Rixey maintains that hospital ships, as a rule, always have been commanded by medical officers, with a sailing master and civilian crew for purposes of navigation. This particular vessel, he says, formerly belonged to the Army and always was commanded by a medical officer when used as a hospital ship. In attempting to unify the medical services of the Army and the Navy he says that a joint army and navy board of medical officers, which was convened by executive order more than a year ago, recommended that hospital ships should be commanded by medical officers, and that that recommendation was approved by both the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy in general orders.

Since the Civil War, he says, all hospital ships and medical transports of the Army had been placed under the Surgeon General of the Army. He says further that Japanese naval hospital ships were commanded by medical officers after having tried line officers. These ships, he says, are simply floating hospitals, properly under the control of the medical department, and should be conducted in peace exactly as in time of war. This is especially so, he adds, because during war time line officers cannot be spared and do not, and should not, desire the command of these ships.

He maintains that it always has been a doubtful question if the Geneva and The Hague agreements could guarantee the neutrality of these ships if combatant (line) officers and crews were aboard, and it was this doubt which prevented the Japanese during the recent war with Russia from using line officers on hospital ships.

PARROT GIVES FIRE ALARM.
Seeing Woman's Apron Ablaze It Screams A Warning.

York (Special).—Warned by a cry of fire uttered by a pet parrot, a wife for a number of years, Miss Sallie Finkle, of this city, was able to save her property and probably her life. The bird seemed to possess almost human intelligence and while Miss Finkle was preparing breakfast it noticed that her apron had caught fire and that a tablecloth which she had brushed against was also ignited.

By uttering screams of "fire, fire," the bird attracted Miss Finkle's attention and she was able to extinguish the flames before they gained much headway.

DOOM OF THE EARTH.
Geological Changes That Will Come About.

Boston, Mass. (Special).—"It is the doom of the earth," said Prof. Percival Lowell in his lecture before the College Club, "to be covered with deserts like Mars, and the time will come when water in this world of ours will be far more precious than gold."

"The kinetic theory of matter reminds us that a small body will lose its gases rapidly, as compared with a larger one, and that is why the moon has already lost its air. For like reason the seas pass away, and, though Mars once had seas, there are none on the planet now and no accumulations of water more than 20 miles across. The only water left in Mars is that which is gathered semi-annually at its polar caps."

"Mars thus lacks water supply, and, leaving out the question of canals, we are led to recognize from the general conditions of the planet that it supports some form of organic life—a form which is peculiarly and manifestly beholden to the polar caps."

ARE MOWED DOWN BY MACHINE GUNS

200 Nitrate Works Strikers in Chili Killed.

TWO WARSHIPS SENT TO SCENE.
Several Thousand Striking Laborers Try to Take Possession of Iquique—Two Bloody Encounters Between Soldiers and Rioters—Some of the Soldiers Reported Wounded.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—According to advices received at the State Department from Consul Hanna at Iquique, Chili, 200 laborers employed near there in the nitrate works were killed on Saturday and Sunday in an encounter with the government troops.

The nitrate deposits are located in another district, and for a week or more there has been trouble of an economic character between the men and their employers, which resulted in a strike.

On Saturday the men to the number of several thousand came into Iquique and attempted to take possession of the town. The troops were called into service and when the rioters refused to disperse, the soldiers were ordered to fire on them, which they did with machine guns, causing much loss of life.

On the following day, which was Sunday, the strikers again assembled in Plaza Prat and listened to incendiary speeches by their leaders, denouncing their employers and encouraging attack upon the government.

Another bloody encounter ensued in which many of the workmen were killed or injured. It is also reported that some of the soldiers were injured, but details cannot be obtained owing to the strict censorship maintained. The Chilean government, according to the department's advices at the time the dispatch was sent, was preparing two cruisers and a transport with soldiers to go to the scene of the disturbance. Although the situation is serious, it is believed that the government will be able to handle it successfully.

The nitrate deposits are leased by the Chilean government chiefly to British and German companies, which employ the native population almost exclusively, with the exception of overseers and foremen. So far as known no American interests are involved, although it is believed that some Americans are employed in the capacity of superintendents and in executive positions. It is not likely, therefore, that an American warship will be sent to Iquique.

The Washington and the Tennessee, comprising Admiral Selbre's special service squadron, passed up the Chilean coast a week ago and are now in Mexican waters. The nearest ship is the gunboat Albany, which is now at Panama, but as she is a small boat, would be of little service if the trouble should continue to be serious. Although the strike is said to be based on economic questions, there is some fear that it may take a political turn, as some of the leaders have been advocating revolution.

Attacked By A Mule.

A crowd of lumbermen, armed with clubs, after a furious fight with the animal, drove it away.
