Prof. W. A. Krise, who is visiting bis daughter, Mrs. Jeff Brown, at Milroy, writes the Reporter thus:

Milroy feels the panicy conditions of the times, as a hundred or more men from here were employed by the Standard Steel Company, at Burnham, and and then they'll cease to bellow." nearly all of these are out of work. The working man's train, which hauled over two hundred men from here and Reedsville to and from their work, has been discontinued for lack of patronage

The limestone quarries are working about half time, and with a reduced force. The knitting factory is doing about the same. At Burnham conditions are worse. The pay roll which contained some five thousand names have been reduced to one thousand. Many houses are empty and rents have taken a big drop. Some laudlords are offering their houses free to tenants to induce them to remain on account of insurance. As the Baldwin Locomotive Company are receiving no orders from home or abroad, and having laid off ten of their nineteen thousand men, the outlook for the Burnham plant is not very flattering. W. O. Rearick, who holds the entire coal and grain trade of Milroy and vicinity, went to Philadelphia Saturday ter, in a very loud voise and stately on account of the death of J. Frank

REV. G. W. McILNAY,

THEY GAVE THE BALLS.

And the People Danced to Pay the Debts of Louis XIV. In 1712 Louis XIV. favored the opera, then established in the first been two), with a special mansion for the better accommodation of its administration, archives and rehearsals. This hotel is situated in the Rue Nicaise. The building was generally designated under the name of Magasin (not de magasin), which was applied not only to the female choristers and supers, but to the female dancers themselves. It so happened that the king forgot to pay his architects and workmen. In order to satisfy them the Chevalier de Bouillon conceived the idea of giving balls in the opera house, for which idea he received an annual pension of 6,000 francs. He was paid, but the king's debtors were not, for, although the letters patent were granted somewhere about the beginning of 1713, not a single ball nificent of the Bourbon sovereigns descended to his grave.

One day shortly after his death d'Argenson, the then lieutenant of police, was talking to Louis' nephew. Philippe d'Orleans, the regent. "Monsignore," he said, "there are people who go about yelling that his majesty of blessed memory was a bankrupt and a thief. I'll have them arrested and have them flung into some deep underground dungeon." "You don't know what you are talking about," was the answer. "Those people must be paid, "But how, monsignore?" "Let's give the balls that were projected by Bouillon." So said, so done, and the people danced to pay Louis XIV.'s debts, as, according to Shadwell, people drank to fill Charles II.'s coffers:

The king's most faithful subjects we In 's service are not dull. We drink to show our loyalty And make his coffers full.

The Penalty of Mirth at an Ancient Church Celebration.

There was a church celebration of a rather exciting nature many years ago in Lynn, Mass. The occurrences mark ing the dedication of the Old Tunnel Meeting house in 1682 are recorded by an eyewitness and quoted in Obadiah Oldpath's "Lin." After the formil ceremony of dedication a feast was

A Felicitous Aside.

A senator, describing a campaign wherein he had outgeneraled a rival, said: "When it became plain that victory was mine, when my opponent's face began to grow darker and more forbidding, I smiled to myself. I could have muttered to myself some such felicitous aside as that which came from the small boy who was being spanked. In the course of his spanking the boy's mother paused to say in sincere tones:

"'Tommy, this hurts me far more than it does you.' "And thereupon in his odd, face downward position the boy winked and muttered to himself: "'I was afraid that hard board I put in the seat of my trousers might injure her delicate hand."

Got It Overboard.

Once while in a foreign port Admiral Dewey ordered the heaviest holsting tackle in the ship to be got out of the hold without delay. Nobody knew what it was for, as there was nothing just at that time, either heavy or light, to be taken on board or sent ashore. After two hours' hard work the tackle was in place, and Dewey then ordered that a large chew of tobacco which had been thrown under one of the guns be hoisted overboard and dumped into the sea.

The Fullness of Country Life.

In the country every morning of the year brings with it a new aspect of springing or fading nature, a new duty possible, gave a powerful blow and to be fulfilled upon earth and a new promise or warning in heaven. No day is without its innocent hope, its special prudence, its kindly gift and its sublime danger and in every process of wise husbandry and every effort of contending or remedial courage. The wholesome passions, pride and bodily power of the laborer are excited and exerted in happiest unison. The companionship of domestic and the care of serviceable animals soften and enlarge his life with lowly charities and discipline him in familiar wisdoms and unboastful fortitudes, while the divine laws of seedtime, which cannot be recalled; harvest, which cannot be hastened, and winter, in which no man can work, compel the impatience and coveting of his heart into labor too submissive to be anxious and rest too sweet to be wanton.-John Ruskin,
