PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed? Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR OLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy. that it is largely employed in the treatment of deprayed muceus membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

Fluid Removed.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPATBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensatory as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic Our Peruna Tablet Is Peruna With (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic entarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

PARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBER, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostatorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSPAUCH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal horbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp. dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy. This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample Quitations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. ROBERT COLLYER.

Subject: Toward the Sunset.

Brooklyn, N. Y. - The venerable but still vigorous Dr. Robert Colyer preached in the First Unitarian Church Sunday morning to a large congregation. His subject was "Looking Toward Sunset," and for his text he took the two passages of Scripture: I. Timothy 4:8: promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come," and II. Cor-inthians 15:53: "This mortal must put on immortality." Dr. Collyer

I think it is no wonder, as the years come and go, and we fare on toward the sunset of the life that now is, the heart in us should feel a touch of dismay now and then when we try to imagine ourselves out of the body, but the same man or woman, away from the world we live in, yet still in a home which will be homelike and welcome, and of a day when the seasons will be no more what they have been or the sun and stars, the streets on which we walk or the homes in which we dwell. A time when we can clasp hands no more with friends; sit no more at the table and join in the cheery talk, go to our work in the morning and when the day's stint is done go home, take some book we love best to read and then go to sleep through the silent, shadowy hours to wake again in the morning and find that God has made all things new. And I think this touch of dismay may well be of all things natural and therefore right, because we are in this body and find that in the measure of our life is our loyalty to the things we can touch and see. To the feeble aged this loyalty to the world he lives in is no more than an instinct to hold on, but in those who are still hale and strong it is a loyalty for which they can give good reason. They love the fragrance of the opening spring that fills them with the old delight, and the summer with her fruits and flowers, and the golden treasures of the autumn, and the white glory of the winter. All this is so dear and human that it comes a little hard to think of a time when all this can be no more what it is here and now. And so it ought to be. If the option were given to many of us while the tides of life run deep and full to exchange this life for the splendors of the celestial city, to give up the fight for the necessaries of life, for the white robes, the harps and crowns, most of us would hesitate to say, we love this best, after all, and do not want to give it up, no matter what may be waiting in the blessed life to come. The gravitation of our being binds us to our planet, and we cannot cry, "Oh, that I had wings like a dove; then would I flee away and be at

Nor do I think that God's gift of life should be thought of as if it were in quarantine and this world a unseen and eternal. I shall pass out unseen and eternal. I shall pass out the better. Some such conclusion, I of one room in the "many mansions" into another, and what treasure in know, may come from brooding over drained their life of all its pleasant-The men who have talked in this strain are men who were either out of sorts or else they did not practice what they preached. The men who have done the most and best were of an abounding human life, and while they were on the way to join the saints they could go hunting with St. Augustine or play or sing with Luther. So of the men who have no special claim to a place among the saints. They loved their own land like good Sir Walter Scott, the waters and to go afishing like Isaac Walton and Paley, who once told a friend that he could not think of writing another word in his once famous book on the evidences until fly-fishing was over.

No one thing in this universe can be of deeper moment to a whole and sound man than his own proper personal life. You may talk to him forever about being lost in the infinite. he will still cling to himself as the true factor and say, with a very noble man I knew who has gone out of the bed to God's house: "I prefer hell to annihilation." The angels are well enough, but he would not be an angel. Angels have had no mothers to croon over them, by what we can make out, or fathers to romp with They never fell in love when them. the time came, wondering over their rare fortune, or made homes where the children clung about their knees, or fought strong battles for the truth and the right, or wept over graves. Angels, then, must be poor where such a man is rich, or rich in som way he cannot as yet understand. He has solved the problem so far of his own personal identity and would not have it resolved into the grandest presence that ever trod the earth. These years, with their clustering memories, are his own years. stand out clear and reveal to the man his own life. A poor thing, he may say, but mine own; full of mistakes, but mine own. I want to keep track of myself. Send me where you will, but let me be sure that I am still the man who is now living this human life, as those are who have lived human lives with me. "The kind, the true, the brave, the sweet who walk with us no more," they will be there in the life to come, not unclothed but clothed upon and then I shall rest in hope for:

It is the dear belief It is the dear belief
That on some solemn shore,
Beyond the reach of grief.
We find our own once more;
Beyond the sphere of time.
And sense and fate's control,
Serene in changeless prime.
Dwells the immortal soul.
This faith I fain would keep,
This hope would not forego:
Eternal be the sleep,
If not to waken so.

If not to waken so There must be another life to round this out and clothe it with perfection. The tree loses nine blossoms for one globe of fruit; the wild things let their young go forth and forget; the flocks are kith and kin, but one is taken and another left and to-morcranct prevent this longing after K Sellew.

self and I am only as shards and shreds of the whole fair circle. My soul demands, if, being mine here, they are not mine hereafter And in looking into my own life I can see where I have missed my way and want to try again. I am only a learner. I want still to learn and turn my lesson to some noble use. So what can this incompleteness mean which haunts but the intimation of completeness? This claim as it seems to me is founded in fair reason, and we hold the right to see the account come out fair and true on this ground, if on no other.

May I not say once more that the years as they come and go should bring the heart to understand that this we call death should not be thought of—and especially by those who like myself have had a long lease of life-as a bane but a blessing, and not to die while so surely would this world be the loser by our staying; that those who love us most dearly would pray that we might be set free from the burden of the over many years. For it would make no matter to the creatures of the lower ereation we have glanced at, if their life could run on forever in the old kindly grooves, because they must measure their life by their instincts, and the present moment is the perfect sphere. They want no better, as they fear no worse, and take no thought for the morrow. The squirrel has his nuts and the bee his honey, and so through all the spheres of their life. But here lies the distinction between our life and theirs: Where they have instincts we have memories, where they have habits we have outlooks and inlooks, anticipations and reflections, and our manhood on the line to which we have risen holds in its heart our cross and our crown The glamor of youth is mine no more; yet, I may remember with tender regret and I may in some dim fashion be aware why the eternal love should give me the blessed boon of death, when I have drank my fill at the fountain of life down here and it is time to cross the bar. And then I must take this truth home to my heart: that by the time I have had enough of life the world I live in now may have had enough of me. So I must not only get out of the world, but out of the way, so that the new man may have room for the work he must do. To most of us the time comes when we begin to trace the truth of the new time by the lines of ongitude and forget the lines of latitude: we do not believe in the new man from the Lord, but want the old man and manhood that will be true to our line of measurement. Again, when we grow old the knowledge of the evil in the world begins to lie like lead on us, while the knowledge of the good can hardly hold its own. One man in ten may take me in and I lose more grace by that one man than I gain by the nine who did not; I think more of the bitter than the sweet, brood over the cruelty and forget the mercy. While I must say, with the great apostle, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." I would hold on well to the faith that I shall be myself when of one room in the "many mansions" the heaven was mine here will be mine there, while that which is to come will not seem so much another life as the ripeness and perfecting of this life that now is. We may say we know nothing about the mystery of the life beyond, but this is not true if we believe in Him who "brought life and immortality to light." We know enough to the heart from trouble, and this is what we need to know, for it was the heart's love which brought us here, that nursed us forth, bore with us, believed in us and hoped for us, and never failed-and that death cannot slay. And so I love to believe inshall I call the solidarity of life here and hereafter, and that I am to be myself whatever befalls-the myself long to be-released from body of this death," and to bear with me all that is best worth God's saving in my life down here; and not a flower has bloomed, or a well sprung up for my blessing, or a bird sung. or a dear friend clasped hands with mine, or tears fallen, or laughter rippled out of a pure joy, to be forgotten. I would be myself, and myself this soul, which has stored up essence of all that shall be of an immortal worth since I lay a babe in the cradle so far away in time and space.

The Man of Prayer. No words can describe the blessingness of a soul which lives in communion with God; asking and receiving, seeking and finding, knocking and having the door opened, wrote Thomas Adam, over a century ago. For what is happiness but this? how can we describe it better than by saying that a man wishes for the very thing he sought and is sure to have it? And such is the man of prayer, the Christian. He chooses the fountain of all happiness for his portion, and can not be disappointed of his desire. He is happy in the very act of prayer, knowing it to be the right frame of his mind, the proof of his renewed state and his capacity for receiving blessing from God.

Preparing Prayer.
All personal work must be permeated with love. A perfunctory invitation or a word spoken without sympathy and love will not prove effective. The spirit in which we approach an unsaved person may render use-less all our labors. Preparation by prayer is necessary before we undertake personal work. If you are in communion with God, it is much easier to get into touch and communion with your fellow men.

In Thine Inner Chamber. Having entered into thine inner chamber, shut thy door against the care and fret of life, against earthly row it is all the same. They do not regret their mistakes or sorrow for their sins as I must, but old friends are taken and I am left, those dear to me as my life or dearer, and I caunot prevent this longing after.

NEWS OF PENNSYLVANIA

PROSPERITY LOOMS UP.

Norristown (Special);-Work has begun on an enlargement of the plant of the Diamond State Fiber Company, Bridgeport, and the doubling of the capacity of March's porkpacking establishment at the same time, give a hopeful prospect for business industry in the center of the Schuylkill Valley. Both establishments give employment to large forces of men.

In addition to the building opera tions already awarded at the State Hospital for the Insane, requiring a million and a half of bricks, Steward John L. West is asking bids for still another brick structure that will cost about $30,000. These contracts are to be let this week.

Similar reports cover conditions in the iron and steel industries of this valley, which are picking up slowly. The same general conditions exists with more alacrity in other parts of this county, especially along the North Penn Railroad. At Landsdale 150 men of the Coxe Stove Company are employed at full time, with a likelihood of the other 150 employees being called any day. The Central Radiator Company and Krup's foundries have full complements at work. All industries at Amber and North everything in readiness to resume full tilt.

"BELLED BUZZARD" CAUGHT.

Oxford (Special).-Great excitement was caused in East Nottingham by the capture of the belled buzzard which for years has taken the place of the legendary stork in that township. Samuel Winchester was the captor and people from all the surrounding neighborhood flocked to his place to see it all day long. This bird has been known for years in East Nottingham, because of its enormous size and because of a sleighbell which someone had wired to its leg a long time ago. Gradually it came to be noticed that every time this buzzard was seen hovering over a farm house, the family was enlarged by a new arrival and of late years this sign has been regarded as infallible, the mothers no longer telling their children of the stork bringing the little ones, but it is always the belled buzzard which carries these precious burdens. Hence, the interest which was felt in its capture. Mr. Winchester says that he intends letting the bird free lest race suicide sweep over the community.
