McClure Haps District Court Held.
At the annual license court held for Snyder county, during the argument to the court for a hotel license at Port Trevorton, Judge McClure stated in open court that, in his judgment, it was entirely out of place for the district attorney to lend his services in the procurement of a liquor license. Miles L. Potter, the district attorney, was one of the four attorneys concerned for this petitioner. The court also suggested that a rule of court should be framed prohibiting a district attorney from being concerned for a liquor license.

Editor Challenged to a Duel.
W. M. Likens, editor of the People's Tribune, Uniontown, Pa., a lively prohibition paper was challenged to a duel at twenty paces with rifles by a mad saloon keeper of that place recently. The saloonist is proprietor of a hotel and declared he was a "business man" and not a saloon keeper. Editor Likens said in his paper that the liquor man was ashamed of his business. The saloonist then called on the editor with a challenge. Mr. Likens is the man to whom Lewis Emory wrote his famous letter grouping the church and school with the brewery. He has entered suit against the saloon keeper. The audacity of some liquor men is appalling.

DR. JOHN B. LEITZELL.

He began the practice of his profession with Dr. Charles Smith at Penn Hall, and in the fall of 1853 located at Stormstown where in the succeeding year he married Miss Emilie Blaskey. During the winter of 1857 he moved to Salona, Clinton county, where he remained for twelve years. In 1866 his wife died, leaving him with three small children. Three years later Dr. Leitzell was married to Miss Delinda Custer.

In 1870 Dr. Leitzell and family moved to Spring Mills, where he met with greater success than in any previous field. From here he went to Illinois, in 1883, where he continued the practice of his profession.

Long and Mrs. H. S. Braucht, all of Spring Mills; and Prof. A. Merrill, of Sioux City, Iowa.

Mrs. Condo was a member of the Presbyterian church, and had many friends who deeply regret her death. The death of her son Raymond, a year ago, greatly grieved her, after which time her health began failing.

WILLIS J. WEBER.
Willis J. Weber died at his home in Rebersburg Wednesday morning of last week of apoplexy, aged sixty-one years. Sunday evening, after his return from attending church, he complained of feeling unwell and shortly after received the stroke which resulted in his death. He was unconscious from the time he was stricken until he passed away.

He is survived by two sons in Kansas and a host of relatives in Centre county.

The delegates to the Republican State Convention are in Harrisburg watching the bosses put through the convention program.

Merchant F. E. Wieland, wife and children, of Linden Hall, drove to Centre Hall Sunday, and spent the day with Prof. P. H. Meyer and family.

A scamp is traveling over the state falsely representing that he is inspecting cattle for the state. If he should happen to call at your farm, boot him off of it.

State Treasurer Berry says the Democratic state convention in May will be controlled by friends of Bryan and that the convention will instruct for the Nebraskan.

Since the operation, Miss Flora Love's condition has improved very much, and there is every hope for her full recovery. By Saturday she expects to leave the Bellefonte Hospital, and go to the home of her uncle, James Carson, Bellefonte.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Homan, of Altoona, are making their home at present with the former's mother, Mrs. Emma Homan, in Centre Hall, during the shut-down of the Pennsylvania Railroad shops. He has been making good use of his time, however, and during the past week erected a porch to the front of his mother's dwelling.

Messrs. Licket and Winklebeck, of Beech Creek, are looking over the timber on the farm of Dr. A. G. Lieb, east of Centre Hall, tenanted by T. A. Corman, with a view of ascertaining the approximate amount of feet that can be cut from it. Dr. Lieb, who lives in Bethlehem, is contemplating having the timber cut, but just who will do it is not known.

Were They the Mental Peers of the Men of Today?

The general idea that our enormous advances in science and command over nature serve as demonstrations of our mental superiority to the men of earlier ages is totally unfounded. The evidence of history and of the earliest monuments alike goes to indicate that our intellectual and moral nature has not advanced in any perceptible degree. In the second place, we find that the supposed great mental inferiority of savages is equally unfounded. The more they are sympathetically studied the more they are found to resemble ourselves in their inherent intellectual powers.
Even the so long despised Australian savages, almost the lowest in material progress, yet show by their complex language, their social regulations and often by an innate nobility of character indications of a very similar inner nature to our own. If they possess fewer philosophers and moralists, they are also free from so large a proportion of unbalanced minds—idiots and lunatics—as we possess. On the other hand, we find in the higher Pacific types men who, though savages as regards material progress, are yet generally admitted to be physically, intellectually and morally our equals, if not our superiors. * * * Thirdly, we have no proof whatever that even the men of the stone age were mentally or morally inferior to ourselves.—Alfred Russel Wallace in Fortnightly Review.

A Curious Grace.

The most curious form, or, rather, expression, of grace after meat which I have ever come across was that customary at Clifford's Inn, one of the vanished inns of chancery. The society consisted of two distinct bodies, the principal and rules and the Kentish mess, each body having its own table. At the conclusion of the dinner the chairman of the Kentish mess, first bowing to the principal of the inn, took from the hands of the servant some small rolls or loaves of bread and, without saying a word, dashed them several times on the table, after which they were taken away. Solemn silence reigned only by the thumbs prevailed during this curious substitute for a verbal grace.—Cor. London Chronicle.

Instinct and Reason.
Instinct is the generic term for all those faculties of mind which lead to the performance of actions that are adaptive in character, but pursued without necessary knowledge of the relation between the means employed and the ends attained. Reason refers to those actions that are adaptive in character and that are pursued with knowledge of the relation between the means employed and the ends aimed at. Such is the technical statement of the difference between instinct and reason, but the real, basic difference between the two faculties is unknown and probably unknowable.—New York American.

Thackeray's Pink Bonnets.
Thackeray was fond of putting pink bonnets on such of his lady characters as were to be specially fascinating. The eternal Becky wore one, the mushy Amelia wore one on her wedding tour (very probably on her second one also), and the dashing Beatrice also set off her beauty by this means.—Exchange.

LAUGHTER ANALYZED.

The Observations of a Man With a Sensitive Ear.

"Of course you have heard," said the man with a sensitive ear, "a laugh that jarred. I don't mean," he continued, "so much a laugh at an inopportune time—I imagine we have all heard such laughs—as a laugh the quality of which is unpleasant. There is something contagious in laughter of the right kind, even though you may be the object of it. It bubbles from the well of good humor. There is no hidden thought, or 'arriere pensee,' as the French say, behind it. It is the essence of frankness; it is spontaneous and whole souled, and it cleanses the system of the laughter and, too, of the hearer, like a spiritual bath."
"But there are other kinds of laughter. The sneering laugh is perhaps the most familiar. Then there is a quiet laugh, a sibilant, secretive sort of laugh that is quite as certain to mean mischief. Another laugh, disagreeable in its nature, is the high pitched, nervous exclamation that comes either from embarrassment or is a mere vocal habit. The worst laugh of all, however, to my mind, is that merciless sound provoked by the distress or embarrassment of others, and it rips apart naturally most of all the object calling it forth. A person laughed at and hurt never forgets the experience."—New York Press.

HUMAN LOVE.

The One Joyous Impulse That Rules the Whole Wide World.

There lives somewhere in the depths of every human heart the divine spark that we call love. It is the voice of the universe shimmering in its narrow cell to be awakened by a whisper or to cry out in dear desire and hear the echoing answer from another soul. Without it life would be a pale, relentless episode. Without its quickening force no temples would be reared by human hands, yet hovels wherein it dwells become more glorious than palaces. Ambition, fame and fortune are its slaves. It chains the mind in sweet imprisonment, makes credulity a guardian queen and hurls suspicion to repose.

No censorship of right or wrong can fight the way of love. It walks in pathways all its own. It laughs at reason and dispels despair. It is the hissing word of children, the puzzle of philosophers, the talisman of rulers. It is the first and last of life—murdered at the cradle, cherished at the grave. It is the rainbow after tears, the cure for every sorrow, the one joyous impulse that rules the whole wide world.—Wade Mountfort in Era Magazine.

The Instinct of Design.

When a Japanese cannot meet the shape of an object when he cannot redesign it by a design, when, in fact, he has no control over its creation at all, but it is placed in his hands as it is, finished, says the author of "Kakeemon," "he will still contrive to add beauty to it merely by arrangement."
"I first noticed this on board the steamer going out," says Mr. Edwards, "where the Japanese boy arranged the extra blanket on the berth in a new design each day. He folded it into lotus leaves and chrysanthemums, into half opened fans and half shut buds. He had one wonderful arrangement which, being patriotic, was more often repeated than the rest. The blankets of the steamship company had at top and bottom two wavy red lines on a white ground. By some wonderful twist of his fingers the boy would fold that blanket into the rising sun, with the four red lines coming out of it like blood red rays. He did it so perfectly that I recognized the flag of Japan the moment I saw it."—Youth's Companion.

Resigned Too Soon.

One Missouri lieutenant governor missed the governorship because he resigned too soon. When Frederick Bates was elected governor, there was chosen for lieutenant governor in the same ticket Benjamin H. Rives of Howard county. Mr. Rives held office a few months and resigned. Shortly after his resignation Governor Bates died, and there being no lieutenant governor the succession fell to the president of the state senate, Abraham J. Williams of Boone county, who served for some six months as governor of Missouri. Governor Williams was a preacher, a shoemaker and had one wooden leg.—Kansas City Star.

Isolated Greece.

Greece is an isolated country of 23,041 square miles that supports a population of some 2,500,000 people. It has no railroad connection with any other country, and being cut off from the rest of Europe by the mountains of Turkish Macedonia on the north, all commerce is by sea. The principal ports are Piraeus (the port for Athens), Patras and Volo on the mainland and the island ports of Syra and Corfu. The Greeks probably number all told 8,000,000, of whom about 4,000,000 are in Turkey.

Well Tested.

"It seems to me that I have heard most of the ideas advanced in your speech before."
"That," said Senator Sorghum, "merely goes to show that they are good ideas, which will stand wear and tear."—Washington Star.

A Reversal.

"What will happen when women rule?"
"Among other things, I presume father-in-law jokes will come into style."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Censure or praise cannot affect a man who knows himself correct.—Baltimore American.
