Escaped Further Injury by Jumping Fence and Hurling Angry Brute's Head.

Charles C. Burrell, a farmer of Lamar township, Clinton county, was attacked by an Alderney bull at his own farm home, which, in its fury, came near putting an end to him. The bull made a mad rush at him, knocking him to the ground, and while it failed to thrust it's horns into his body, yet with its head and horns, the mad bull succeeded in bruising Mr. Burrell's body and lower limbs very painfully, before he was able to get to his feet. As soon as he arose he rushed to a near by fence and sprang over it which no doubt was all that saved the farmer from a second attack. As the bull rushed at him again and being headed off by the fence it gave Mr. Burrell an opportunity to throw a hatchet, which he still grasped in his hard, the blade of which struck the monster brute fair in the head, which caused him to turn and leave. It was a narrow escape for Mr. Burrell and that he was not more seriously injured was next to a miracle.

A LESSON IN GERMAN.

Follow It Closely and You Will See How Really Simple It Is.

Among the Hottentots (Hottentoten In German) the kangaroos (Beutelratte) and unmolested; others, less fortunate, are taken by hunters and put into cages (Kotter) provided with covers (Lattengitter) to keep out the rain. These cages are called in German Lattengitterwetterkotter, and the kangaroo after his imprisonment takes the name of Lattengitterwetterkotterbeutelratte. One day an assassin (Attentater) was arrested who had killed a Hottentot woman, Hottentotmutter, the mother of two stupid and stuttering children in Straettertrottel. This woman in the German language is entitled Hottentotenstraettertrotfelmutter, and her assassin takes the name Hottentotenstraettermuttertaeter. The murderer was confined in a kangaroo's cage - Beutelrattenlattengitterwetterkotter-when a few days later he escaped, but fortunately he was recaptured by a Hottentot, who presented himself at the mayor's office with beaming face. "I have captured the Attentacter," said he. the mayor.

"Then why don't you say at once the Hottentotenstrattelmutterattentaerlattengitterwetterkotterbeutelratte?" The Hottentot fied in dismay.

THE AWKWARD "MRS."

Single as Well as Married Women

Once Carried This Title. A curiously awkward word, if it be a word, is "Mrs." It is not spelled as it is pronounced-no one but a Welshman or a Pole would be equal to pronouncing it as it is spelled-and its pronunciation is a clumsy contraction of the good old English designation "mistress."

In the days of old, when leisure had not become, as it is now, almost a forgotten luxury and people were less anxions to clip their speech, the full pronunciation was often used, and "mistress" was not altogether elbowed out of existence by the vulgar "missis." But nowadays "mistress" has dropped out, and consequently the contracted pronunciation of "Mrs." has prevailed and holds the field.

Another point worth noting in the history of the designation is that about 150 years ago and earlier "Mrs." was applied quite impartially to unmarried as well as married ladies. Even children were sometimes styled "Mrs."

The burial of an infant daughter of John Milton, who died at the age of five months, is recorded in the parish erine Milton," followed by a small "c," to indicate that a child is meant. But this may be regarded as an exceptional use of the title.-St. James' Gazette.

batarian dog I ever knew. He used to sleep on a rug in my room. I had to keep early hours in those days, and every morning at 7 o'clock Tip would put his cold nose against my face and remind me that it was time to go to work. Then while I was dressing he would go to the village postoffice and bring home the mail. On Sunday morning he never stirred off his rug until I was good and ready to get up, which was usually quite late, and nothing could induce him to go to the postoffice on that day. And the best part of the story is it is absolutely true."-New York Tribune.
