Smulton. Rev. Dize with his family, of Milroy, enjoyed a drive across the Seven Mountains to this town and visited for several days at the home of Wallace Brungard, Mrs. Brungard being a niece of Rev. Dize. Mrs. Parks has gone to Sunbury to visit her daughter. Mrs. Edwin Gramley, with her sister, Mazie Hartman, of Philadelphia, is visiting friends here. Dr. Groff and wife, of Millheim, were Sunday visitors at the home of George H. Small. Clyde White and wife attended the funeral of Mrs. Walter's sister, Miss Tammie Stover, who died quite suddenly at Chambersburg, where she had gone for a visit of several days. She was buried at Wolf's Chapel, from which vicinity her family removed to Brush Valley several years ago. C. D. Motz, in company with Ben Kuhn, of Woodward, transacted business in town for a day during the week. Mrs. Israel Haugh returned home from Dent's Run, where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Curt Bierly for several weeks. Mrs. C. O. Mallory came on from Turtle Creek with the expectation of remaining here for the winter.

EBONY WOOD.

All of the Several Varieties Are Heavier Than Water. Ebony was known and highly esteemed by the ancients as an article of luxury and was used by them for a variety of purposes. In India it is said that it was employed by kings for scepters and also for images. On account of its supposed antagonism to poisons it was used largely for drinking cups. The name ebony is given to the wood of several varieties of trees. All kinds of ebony are distinguished for their great density and dark color. The wood in all varieties is heavier than water. The heaviest varieties are the darkest. The other grades require a considerable amount of staining to make them black. Ebony is of a uniform color throughout and will not show any deterioration even from long continued use. There are three varieties of ebony well known in commerce. The ebony from the Gaboon coast of Africa is the darkest. The Madagascar ebony is the densest. The Macassar ebony furnishes the largest pieces. It is sold by weight. Imitations of ebony can always be distinguished by their lighter weight, and the cheaper imitations can be detected by merely scratching the surface.

SPECTRAL WARNINGS.

The Bloody Mark That Appeared on Cardan's Finger. Who shall say that spectral warnings are entirely chimerical? History has many instances to the contrary. Thus the once well known tragedian John Palmer died on the stage at Liverpool. At the same hour and minute a shopman in London, sleeping under a counter, saw distinctly his shade glide through the shop, open the door and pop into the street. This an hour or two later he mentioned very coolly, as if Mr. Palmer himself had been there. Cardan, the noted Italian philosopher, saw on the ring finger of his right hand the mark of a bloody sword and heard at the same time a voice which bade him go to Milan. The redness progressively increased until midnight. The mark then faded gradually and disappeared. At that midnight hour his son was beheaded at Milan. The father of Dr. Blomby was captain in an army serving in America. We are told by Dr. Rudge that six officers 300 miles from his position were visited after dinner by this modern Banquet who sat down in a vacant chair. One said to him, "Blomby, are you mad?" He rose in silence and slowly glided out at the door. He was slain on that day and hour.—St. James' Gazette.

The Wooing of the Woodcock. The wooing of the woodcock is one of those sights to witness which a lover of nature in all its moods will make a journey of miles. The scene is enacted at twilight, and the setting is of willow or alder bushes whose branches are just beginning to show the tender green of early spring. Suddenly from the damp ground a bird form shoots upward like some swamp spirit until it is outlined against the gray of the evening sky. Then it circles above the branches, and the song of the wooing begins. Hidden in the darkness of the thick lower growth is the object to which this love song is directed. The bird above circles perhaps a score of times, then drops back to the damp thicket, making a sound which can be likened only to the dropping of water into a woodland pool. Again the bird soars and circles, singing still the love song. This is repeated time after time until the last gleam of light has faded and night's darkness comes down.

The Life Saving Service. The first stations of a life saving service in this country were established by the Massachusetts Humane society at Lovell Island and Cohasset. All efforts for saving life and property in cases of shipwreck were made by this society till 1837, when the president of the United States was authorized to employ ships to cruise along the shores and render assistance to distressed navigators. In 1848 congress passed a law creating a few life saving stations between Sandy Hook and Little Egg harbor, New Jersey. From this has grown the splendid system which now takes in all the coasts of the country.—New York American.

A Watch Tip. "So you lost your watch in the crowd, eh?" Leocq, the detective, sneered. "Well, I'm ashamed of you." "You ought to know after your long friendship with me that there's only one safe way for a man to carry a costly watch—in the right hand vest pocket, with the chain running into the right and left pockets. "The thief always snatches at the left pocket, and of course by my system he gets only a key or a cheap compass."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Quite Unexpected. The Mistress—What, Suzanne, going to leave me? Going to get married? This is most unexpected. The French Maid—Oul, madame, but eet ces not my fault. Eet was only last night zat your son proposed to me.—Harper's Bazar. Why They Doubted Him. Hewitt—Figures won't lie. Jewett—That's what I tell the people I meet in business, but they won't believe me. Hewitt—What is your business? Jewett—I'm collector for a gas company.—Town and Country. A CASE IN POINT.

Why the Postmaster Leaned Toward the Sheriff. There is a town in northern New Hampshire where the families have intermarried to such an extent that it is difficult for an outsider to make the least criticism on one person without the danger of offending some of his family connections. When an unfortunate visitor commented on this fact to Mr. Corbin, the postmaster, Mr. Corbin nodded violently. "Bill Harmon, that's our sheriff, complained of that no longer ago than last week," said he. "You see, it took him more'n a fortnight to arrest Nate Gliddings because Nate got wind that he was wanted on a little matter o' selling hard cider, and he went on a round o' visits among his relatives—aunts, nephews-in-law and I don't know what all—and 'twasn't till he'd had his fun and went back home to his wife that Bill could make the arrest without seeming to kind o' butt in, as you might say, and spoil the reunions." "I should think he would make a queer kind of sheriff," said the visitor, "waiting all that time for sentimental reasons and then arresting a man when he went home just because his poor wife wasn't a relation!" Mr. Corbin drew himself up and assumed a remote expression. "That's as you look at it," he said in a chilly tone. "I may be a mite prejudiced in Bill's favor, as he married my son-in-law's youngest sister. Anything that concerns him concerns me, you understand."

CONQUERORS CONQUERED.

The Fate of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar and Napoleon. It is a remarkable and instructive fact that the careers of four of the most renowned characters that ever lived, closed with violent or mournful death. Alexander, after looking down from the dizzy heights of his ambition upon a conquered world and weeping that there were no more to conquer, died of intoxication in a scene of shame; or, as some suppose, by poison mingled in his wine. Hannibal, whose name carried terror to the heart of Rome itself, after having crossed the Alps and put to flight the armies of the mightiest of the world, was driven from his country, and died at last of poison administered by his own hands in a foreign land, unlamented and unwept. Caesar, the conqueror of 800 cities and his temples bound with chains, dipped in the blood of a million of his foes, was miserably assassinated by those he considered his nearest friends. Bonaparte, whose mandate kings and emperors obeyed, after filling the earth with the terror of his name, closed his days in lonely banishment upon a barren rock in the midst of the Atlantic ocean. Such the four men who may be considered representatives of all whom the world calls great and such their end—intoxication or poison, suicide, murdered by friends, lonely exile.

Pointed With Scripture. A bachelor rector of a western church was alone in his study when his housekeeper brought him the card of one of his parishioners, a spinster of means and charm. When the lady was seated on the opposite side of his study table the rector looked at her inquiringly, expecting to hear something concerning parish work, in which she was active. To his surprise an embarrassed silence ensued, during which he vainly sought for something to say. "Dr. Blank," began the lady at last in faltering tones, "do you think—a woman is—justified in proposing?" "Why, yes," said the rector, after some deliberation. "Thou art the man!" said the lady resolutely. She was right.

A Ready Answer. The captain of a schooner that trades between New York and Savannah is noted for his wit, and on every occasion that offers he loosens his shafts of humor, to the chagrin and embarrassment of his target. Sooner or later the blunder gets stung, and this chronic pun artist is no exception to the rule. On one occasion when about two days out from New York he approached a group of sailors who were washing the forward deck, and, singling out a big, rawboned Irishman who was experiencing his first taste of sailor's life, he gravely asked, "Can you steer the mahogany down the forecastle stairs?" Quick as a flash came the reply, "Yis, sor; I can if you will stand below and coil it up."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rough on the Doctor. One night as a Canadian doctor who lives in eastern Ontario was driving into a village he saw a chap, a little the worse for liquor, amusing a crowd of spectators with the antics of his trick dog. The doctor watched him awhile and said: "Sandy, how do you manage to train your dog? I can't teach mine to do anything." Sandy, with that simple look in his eyes, said, "Well, you see, doc, you have to know more'n the dog or you can't learn him nothing." An Ideal Husband. The Man—And you really think you have an ideal husband, don't you? The Matron—I know I have. Why, he treats me as if he were a candidate for office and I was a voter.—Chicago News. About the poorest kind of a reputation is the kind a man gets for being sarcastic.—Chicago Record-Herald. Centre Reporter, $1.00 per year.
