Willis Wian, son of Frank Wian, secured a Model D, Franklin touring car, and started an automobile hack service in Bellefonte, with the purpose of transporting passengers in the community and hiring the same for trips elsewhere when desired.

Wallace H. Gephart, eldest son of the late J. W. Gephart, by an action of the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania, was made president and general manager of that company, to succeed Col. C. M. Clements, of Sunbury. The office of the new president will be in Bellefonte.

Justice to Wall Street is the keynote of the May Everybody's. Taking up a stand between the radicalism of "Frenzied Finance" days, and the conservatism of Wall Street's present defenders, Frederick Upham Adams and the publishers of Everybody's offer the calmest and most complete exposition of the People vs. the Stock-Gambling Game that has yet been heard.

To recuperate his health was the main object of P. M. Weber, of Huntingdon, in coming to Centre Hall to spend a short time with his brother, John H. Weber. Mr. Weber just experienced an illness that kept him confined for six weeks. He is connected with the Huntingdon Reformatory, and is superintendent of the laundry department, a position he has filled with credit for a number of years.

Township Boards of Health.

Something that has escaped the eyes of township politicians hereabouts is the passage by the Senate of a bill that was introduced in the House and which now goes to the governor for his signature, repealing the act of 1899 giving township school boards power to act as Boards of Health. If Governor Stuart signs the repealer it will place the administration of health affairs in the hands of state agents and township health officers will be a thing of the past after the expiration of the terms of those now holding office. This repealer was fathered by the State Health department and the desire to do away with the township board's health officers was because there were in some parts of the state frequent clashes of authority between the state agents and the township health officers.

Concerning Presbyterians.

The statement recently printed in The Centre Reporter that the Supreme court of Tennessee has decided that the Cumberland Presbyterian church still exists and is entitled to the property, taken by itself, may mislead. This decision applies only to property held by the local churches in the above state and not to the property of the denominations as a whole, some of which is situated in the state. The Supreme courts of four other states: Illinois, Texas, Georgia and Kentucky, have given an opposite decision, viz: that the union of the Cumberland church with the Presbyterian church was legally effected and that the property belongs to the Unionists. Many think that if the matter should be appealed to the Federal courts the Tennessee decision would not stand. Steps have been taken for an amiable division of the property between the Unionists and Anti-Unionists. The latter are greatly in the minority but hitherto seemed unwilling to listen to any proposition for a compromise. Now that they have the comfort of one state court decision in their favor out of five state court decisions perhaps they will be more willing to enter into a friendly settlement, and the whole matter brought to a conclusion honorable to all.

W. H. SCHUYLER.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting Saturday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. W. B. Mingle. Every lady in Centre Hall and vicinity is cordially invited to be present at this meeting and join the White Ribbon army to battle for God and home and native land.

Superintendents have been appointed to secure temperance literature and distribute in public places; to organize and interest the children in the temperance movement. Temperance children will make temperance parents. True reform must rest its corner stone in childhood.

"To reform the inebriate is noble work; but to fortify against all needs of reform is more noble and more efficient work."

Farm for Sale Near Millroy.

The undersigned offers for sale a farm, near Millroy, consisting of 200 acres, 160 of which is in cultivation. Balance contains good merchantable timber. Much is limestone land. About 50 acres is adapted to truck raising, and can be irrigated by a gravity irrigation plant. Running water in nearly all fields. Average annual yield of wheat for fifteen years was 1100 bushels. It is also a good stock farm. Price only $5000. For particulars address, J. C. HOUSER, Lewistown, Pa.

Lutz's Restaurant.

Joseph Lutz opened his restaurant in the room adjoining the meat market, and will serve ice cream, sandwiches, beans, etc., every Saturday evening. In a short time he hopes to have the restaurant open at all hours.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral of Joseph Kuhn, Saturday afternoon, were Mr. and Mrs. David Barlett and daughter, of Bellefonte; Mr. and Mrs. John Page, of Rebersburg; Mr. and Mrs. John Kuhn, of the Old Fort; Mr. and Mrs. Kerstetter, of State College; Andrew Kuhn and sons, Clement and Dale, of Rock View; George Kuhn, of Millin county; Miss Nellie Kuhn, of Spring Mills, and David Kuhn, of the Branch.

George E. Meyer, of Altoona, is spending a few weeks at the home of his parents, where he is engaged in making some improvements. He attended the Laymen's Missionary convention at Harrisburg in March, as a delegate from the Trinity Reformed church, in Altoona. His talks about the convention are both interesting and instructive. Every delegate was the recipient of a Chinese coin as a memento of that great gathering of men. These coins will be carried as pocket pieces. The coin is a round coin, about the size of a silver half dollar, with a square opening in the centre. When the small value of the coin is known the reason for the hole in it is easily understood, but why it should be square instead of round is a mystery. It takes eleven of these to equal in value one cent of our money. When the Chinaman goes marketing or shopping he must take a great many of these coins with him if he wishes to make extensive purchases, so he strings his money, and hangs it over his shoulder. Sometimes a donkey is used to carry the money when a great amount is needed. Some of these coins bear a very ancient date, but it is not stamped on in figures. The age can be told by the dynasty whose mark is on the money.

A SUNDAY STROLL.

This Recreation Was at One Time Unlawful in Maine.

Something of the exact behavior demanded from young people by those in authority in the early days of the nineteenth century is brought to notice in the biography of Peter Edes, a pioneer printer in Maine. Mr. Edes had an apprentice, James Orrock, who enjoyed a walk on Sunday after a week of in-door employment.

Mr. Edes soon found out that this was not permitted at Bangor and wrote to a friend of the trouble caused him by his apprentice's apparently innocent amusement.

"You must know," he writes, "that the people are very strict on this day and will not let men walk out, much less boys. James was strolling about and was ordered home by the tything men, but he would not obey them. A complaint was lodged against me on the next day, and I should have been obliged to pay a fine had not Judge Dutton pleaded in my behalf that I did not approve of such conduct and so got clear."

Another interesting incident in connection with life in Bangor at this time is an advertisement which appeared in Mr. Edes' paper, the Bangor Weekly Register, stating that "E. & M. R. Edes had opened a school in the room over the Register office for the instruction of young misses and small children in the useful and ornamental branches of education."

The terms were: "Orthography and plain work, 17 cents per week; writing, English grammar, geography with the use of maps, composition, ornamental needlework, 25 cents per week." This was probably one of the first schools in Maine for teaching young ladies exclusively in the branches of education and also including plain work and fancy needlework.

CAN YOU SPELL?

Test Your Ability by Writing This Jumble From Dictation.

It is some time ago since spelling bees were popular forms of entertainment in this country, but still one occasionally comes across the very superior person who tells you he can easily spell any word ever printed in a dictionary. If ever you meet this type of man, just ask somebody to dictate the following jumble to him and see how many mistakes he will make:

"Antinous, a disappointed, desolated physicist, was peeling potatoes in an embarrassing and harassing way. His idiosyncrasy and privilege was to eat mayonnaise and mussels while staring at the Pleiades and seizing people's tricycles and velocipedes. He was an erratic teetotaler and had been on a picaune jamboree. He rode a palfrey stallion and carried a salable papier mache bouquet of asters, phlox, mullein, chrysanthemums, rhododendrons, fuchsias and pasturtiums.

"He wore a sibilant resplendent turquoise paraphernalia, an ornolu yashnak and astrakhan chaparejos. He drank crystallizable and disagreeable curacao juleps through a sieve. He stole some moneys and hid them under a peddler's mahogany bedstead and mattress.

"Like a fiend in an ecstasy of gaiety I rushed after him into the maelstrom, or melee, and held him as in a vise. I could not feaze him, however, and he addressed me, with autocracy, in the following imbecile words, which sounded like a soliloquy or a superseded paean on an oboe: 'You are a tatable lunamoth, a salaaming vizer, an equinoctial coryphee and an isoclesis daguerreotype.'"—New York Mail.

A Curious Story.

The queen of Hanover, wife of King Ernest Augustus of Hanover (better known as the Duke of Cumberland, son of George III.), died at Hanover about 1842 of an illness which baffled the skill of her doctors as to its real cause. During her illness a clairvoyant was consulted, who wrote certain curious signs and words on the door of her bedroom; but, although these mystic words were repeated over and over again, the queen died. The king of Hanover after his wife's death gave orders that her bedroom should always be kept as though the queen would sleep there at night. The bed was turned down, the pillows reshaken, hot water brought and the dimmest slippers laid in readiness for her.—Home Notes.

Yet They Needed Exercise.

Two men whose offices were on the second floor were on the first floor waiting for an elevator. Long and impatiently they waited.

"You're not looking extra well, London," remarked the lawyer.

"No, Rangle," replied the real estate man. "Think I'll join an athletic club. I need the exercise."

"Me too."

Still they waited for the elevator.—Kansas City Times.

He Meant Dollars.

"Old Cosh landed in this country in his bare feet ten years ago. Now he's got millions."

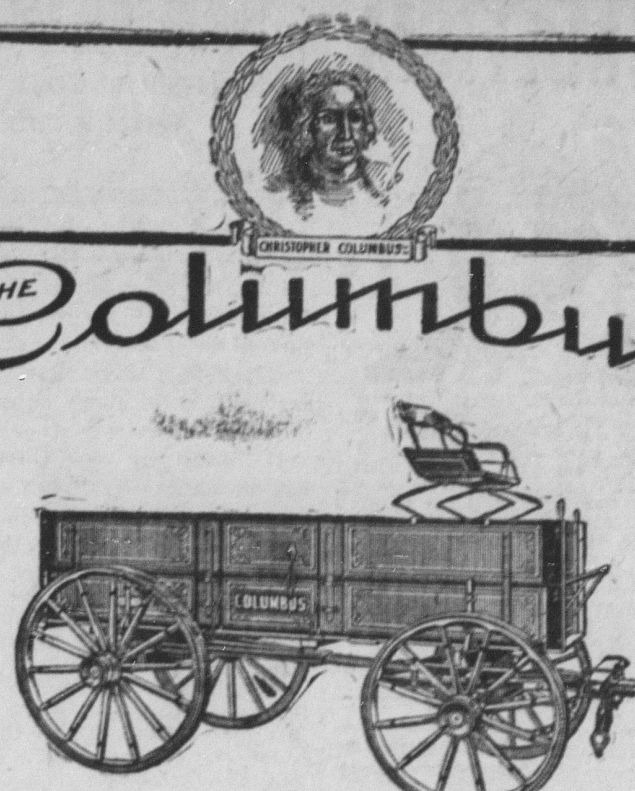

"You don't say! Why, he's got a centiped skinned to death, hasn't he?"—Cleveland Leader.
