Everybody's June fiction is rather out of the ordinary. In the first place, Eleanor Abbott maintains the standard set by her famous prize stories. In "Along the Ripply River" she tells of love and adventure and heroism with all her usual charm and a little more than her usual vigor, and out of it all evolves an absorbingly interesting tale. Everybody's June fiction is rather interesting tale.

Mrs. J. H. Price, of Henry, Illinois, in making a remittance sends these notes about that state :

We erjoy reading the Reporter very much, as it has a great deal of news about people with whom I am well acquainted.

The town we now live in has a population of about eighteen hundred. It is situated on the banks of the Illinois river. At present the river is considerably higher than in the summer. evening. Come and help along a good The bridge across the river is over nine cause. Proceeds for the benefit of the hundred feet long, and has one section hundred feet long, and has one section which is swung open to allow large boats to pass through. A little above the bridge is the lock and dam. When the water is low the boats cannot go over the dam and then the lock is used.

This is a great freight center, both by boat and rail. One boat makes daily trips from La Salle to Peoria and return. They carry a great deal of S. E. Gobble, wife and little son, freight, also passengers. There are Walter, spent Sunday at the home of also a number of xeursion boats, one of which can carry three thousand the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. people. In the summer time show boats also ply up and down the stream. Steam launches may be seen most any time of the day going up and down the river. The 19th of June there is to be a launch race, in which about one hundred launches will take part.

Henry has seven churches, a German school, a graded and a high school. There are nine teachers, and about three hundred scholars. Most of the people here are Germans,

This has been an exceptionally late spring, and very changeable weather. The farmers have not near all their plowing done or their corn planted. We have had a number of hard storms this spring. On the sixth of April a tornado passed through this part of the country. It leveled many buildings, wind mills, fences and trees, and moved a number of buildings from their foundations.

forty, and slight frosts are reported in some sections of the valley. Monday afternoon a hail storm passed over the valley a few miles west of Centre Hall.

Wouldn't a state road from the borough line at the station to the borough line at the base of Nittany Mountain be the best thing Centre Hall could invest in? It would not only benefit residents of the borough but every one who lived near to it. Every one who comes to Centre Hall on business or pleasure would profit if a good road would supplant the miser able one we now have.

Mrs. Elvina Lenker and daughter, for the maintenance of turn pikes condemned in the usual way. Since the repeal of this law these turn pikes fall on the townships and boroughs State College, spent a few days among through which they pass for maintenance. Centre county never profited under this law, and in the meantime the pikes have been neglected, and now the townships have saddled on them the whole of the expense for repairing these roads. Potter township fell heir to a considerable number of miles of road under this repealer, and the only thing left to do is for the road supervisors to accept the situation with grace and patch up the inheri-
