Ginseng.
Among the medicinal plants growing in the mountains near Centre Hall, the most valuable is ginseng. The aromatic root of this plant is so greatly valued in China for its supposed power of overcoming fatigue and old age that it cannot be gathered except by order of the emperor.

The stem grows about one foot high, with a whorl of leaves at the top, and from the center of this whorl rises a stem which in September bears at its top a bunch of red berries.

The root is spindle shaped like a long radish, and is quoted in the wholesale market at $7.50 per pound, when dry, and $2.50 when green.

The plant is easily cultivated, and a garden one rod square will harvest root to the value of from $75.00 to $100.00, when in good yielding condition.

It is next to impossible to find wild ginseng without the aid of one who knows the peculiarities of the plant.

The top resembles wild sarsaparilla and is usually found in sandy loam, on the north slope of heavily timbered mountains, where it is always cool and shaded, and the soil is neither too dry nor too wet.

Those who are interested in this article should write to Oliver G. Wilson, Frankfort, Kentucky, for his book on ginseng culture. The U. S. Department of Agriculture issues free a circular known as Bulletin No. 139, which contains descriptions of thirty-five medicinal herbs in the United States, with suggestions as to their collection, preservation and current market price. These bulletins will also be of interest, namely, No. 89, "Wild Medicinal Plants in the U. S.," price 25 cents, and No. 107, "American Root Drugs," price 15 cents. G. F. N.

Where is Your Hair?
In your comb? Why so? Is not the head a much better place for it? Better keep what is left where it belongs! Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, quickly stops falling hair. There is not a particle of doubt about it. We speak very positively about this, for we know.
Does not change the color of the hair.

Formula with each bottle
Show it to your doctor
Ask him about it, then do as he says

Ayer's

Indeed, the one great leading feature of our new Hair Vigor may well be said to be this—it stops falling hair. Then it goes one step further—it aids nature in restoring the hair and scalp to a healthy condition. Ask for "the new kind."
