

Youth Stabs Collision

A bit of a stir was created in Centre Hall Saturday evening by a boy named Earle Walker, of Milroy. He and several other boys were playing on the walk, when unobserved by any of them he drew a knife and plunged the blade into the shoulder of one of his companions, David Lauck, son of W. C. Lauck, east of Centre Hall. The Walker lad then ran down the street.

Young Lauck was taken to a store by his friends, and when his shoulder was bared the broken blade was found sticking in the flesh and bone, the stroke having been sufficiently hard to break the weapon. Dr. Allison dressed the wound, and no serious results are anticipated.

Lauck is sixteen years old, but small for his years. Walker is about two years his junior, and, it is said, belongs to a family of not a very savory reputation. The family had intended moving here but now plans have been changed.

He is a brother-in-law of Martin Keller, who purchased the Alexander farm from Dr. Bitner, mention of which is made elsewhere in this issue, one of the objects of the young men buying these particular farms was that they might live near each other.
