Lawyers And Doctors.

Most lawyers take a keen delight trying to confuse medical experts in the witness box in murder trials, and often they get paid back in their own coin.

A case is recalled where the lawyer, after exercising all his puzzling tactics without effect, looked quizzically at the doctor who was testifying and said:

"You will admit that doctors sometimes make mistakes, won't you?"

"Oh, yes; the same as lawyers," was the cool reply.

"And doctors' mistakes are buried six feet under ground," was the lawyer's triumphant reply.

"Yes," he replied, "and the lawyers' mistakes often swing in the air."

WHO OWNS THE AIR?

A Pressing Problem That Must Be Settled at Once is Whether an Aviator Has the Right of Way Over Private Property, the Ownership of Which in Every Case, According to the Old Roman Law, Extends Upward Indefinitely.

New York City.—How high must an aviator fly to be safe from the consequences of illegal trespass? and a great many other questions, not burning now but considered as soon to be hot ones, were treated by Lytleton Fox, a lawyer, in an address to members of the Aero Club of America. The answer was that the aviator would have to be out of sight. He must dodge the police.

The old Roman law which gives to the owner of land absolute ownership also of the air above it is responsible for this. The law must be changed, he added, or the courts will be ruinously congested. As matters stand, there have been no changes in the law for several hundred years, a man in a flying machine has no rights that a man with a plow is bound to respect. The question is how best to bring the attention of the judicial system to this unfair discrimination against the flying portion of the race. No man can fly as things now stand without technically breaking the law, unless he gets special privileges from the landowners.

It is a problem that bristles with novelty, says Mr. Fox. In the event of pedestrians being hit by ginger pop bottles dropped by the passing aviator or by other objects, including the aviator himself, the man below would have redress at law. Mr. Fox believes the Aero Club should urge the Wright brothers, for instance, to consent to be sued by the owner of land over which they have flown (and thereby trespassed), so that the whole subject before the courts for settlement. The suit should be a friendly one, he said, the object being to modify, if possible, the law of aerial trespass. Another way might be to condemn the air by legal procedure, and thus knock over the historical fossil.

A discussion that followed the address of the evening resulted in the members arriving at the firm belief that the air should be considered a highway, and there was a preliminary talk concerning an attempt at legislative enactment.

To avert suits for aerial trespass Mr. Fox suggests that the State condemn and buy a stratum of air as a highway for flying machines. The fact that Count Lambert in his flight across Paris violated a police regulation forbidding aeroplaning over the city shows that the French have already applied the law to cover one phase of the question. By leasing the aerodrome for his Paris flight Lambert incurred a penalty of $4.

at the Rheims meet an aviator was fined for reckless driving.

The military airship will necessitate new provisions in international law to meet the new problems of international relations which it will raise. France has now seven airships. Germany eleven and Italy five in course of construction. Given a fleet of Zeppelins arriving unannounced by an invention which threatens the act constitute a cause of war? If the aeroplane develops the power to carry explosives for dropping on an enemy's fleet, will the practice be permitted under the rules of war?

The interesting fact in connection with the suggested regulation of air travel is that it is already made necessary by an invention only yesterday in its infancy which threatens a revision of the statute books along with its revolution of traffic.

In advocating arrangements for a test suit, Mr. Fox seems to believe that after the existing legal status of an aerial trespasser has once been clearly outlined the law may be so modified that the air will be pronounced a public highway. Legislation of that kind, however, would be unfortunate if it were not very accurately limited. There is a wide difference between navigation of the sea and navigation of the air. If a transatlantic steamship is badly handled those who are on board her may suffer, and she may injure another craft which is on the same level. There is practically no chance, however, that she will harm anybody or anything directly under her, at the bottom of the ocean. She can discard ashes, ballast or any other material without fear of doing mischief. If such things are dropped from an airship, there will always be a possibility of danger—a danger which is enhanced by the temperamental characteristics of those who engage in aerial navigation for sport.

Editorially the New York Times says:

"Will the invasion of the air by aeroplanes be repelled by suits for trespass?"

"We think not. The first successful human flight made the air a highway—a possibility not contemplated in the Roman law. Besides, there can be no effective possession of the upper air by a land owner. Where possession neither is nor has been, there should be no ownership. At any rate, this is assumed in Germany and Switzerland, which have passed statutes establishing rules of the aerial road."

COFFINS TOO CHEAP, MAKERS COMPLAIN

The Burial Casket Men Say Cost of Dying Has Not Kept Pace With Increased Cost of Living.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The burial casket manufacturers and jobbers, in convention here, are dissatisfied because the cost of dying has not kept pace with the increased cost of living. They deprecate cut-rate funerals, and are proposing to establish uniform prices for the retail trade in coffins.

"We coffin makers want the undertakers to help us out more than they do," said one delegate. "We want the undertakers to make stiffer bills, and then we can get more for our goods. Why should we have to pay double what we used to pay to live and let people die cheaply? It isn't fair and it isn't logical. There are too many undertakers. They are cutting each other's throats to get business, and what is more to the point, they are cutting prices. Another thing, the supply of coffins is greater than the demand; that's what makes 'em so cheap."

"If a man wants a decent burial he ought to be made to pay a decent price for it. It isn't as though it was a steady drain on the family purse. Coffins are bought only occasionally, and when the occasion arises they ought to be willing to do the thing handsomely."

FOREGOES CLOISTER TO FIND LOST FATHER

Miss Swanson Discovers Him in Jail as Burglar and Will Now Seek to Procure His Parole.

St. Louis.—Miss Elsie Swanson, of St. Louis, renounced her aspiration to become a nun because she believed her duty was to search for her father, whom she had not seen for eleven years. She found him in the County Jail at Jonlin, a few minutes after he was convicted of burglary and larceny and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

Swanson did not recognize his daughter, but she picked him from a crowd of prisoners in the main cell room. Father and daughter wept in each others' arms. She will now try to obtain a parole for him, and as he was convicted solely on his own admission of guilt it is possible her plea for clemency will be granted.

Miss Swanson, who is twenty-one years old, is the ward of the Rev. C. C. Stahlmann, who took her from the custody of her father when she was ten years old. Swanson having been declared unfit to care for her. She was educated in a convent here.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR.

Big, Painful Swellings Broke and Did Not Heal—Suffered 3 Years—Tortures Yielded to Cuticura.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. I continued until I had used three sets, and now I am sound and well. The disease lasted three years. O. L. Wilson, Puryear, Tenn., Feb. 8, 1908." Potter Drug & Chem. An Unbearable Novelty.

"So Lewis' Waller is going to tour America! He'll make a hit here. He's so dashing."

The speaker, a New York manager, smiled and resumed:

"Waller will now be able to test the verisimilitude of his American stories. He has, you know, a host of them. One is about the mining town of Tin Can."

"According to Waller, a tenderfoot entered Tin Can on an August day in white duck trousers. The residents at once surrounded him, bound him hand and foot, and thrust him into a baggage car of a departing train."

"Never," said the Mayor, as the train drew forth—"never you come back here, pale face, under no consideration again. We can stand billed shirts, but when it comes to billed drawers—wow!"

He Didn't Know.

He was telling three or four of us about once belonging to a baseball team, when the man with the bad cigar observed:

"But did any of you fellows ever see a game of football?"

"Great Scott, man, but you don't mean that you haven't?" exclaimed the story-teller.

"Well, I Junno. Sometimes I think I have, and sometimes I doubt it. It was one time years ago. It was in a field. There was a heap of people there, and they did a heap of yelling. I yelled, too, but I dunno what for."

"How did it go?" was asked.

"Well, a lot of fellers come out with a big ball. They stood and motioned and jawed for a while, and during this time someone picked my pocket of $8."

"I see."

"Then one of the fellers kicked the ball and everybody began to holler. I hollered, too, and while I was hollering someone stole my watch."

"Go on."

"Then two fellers ran and jumped on another feller. Then three fellers jumped on the two fellers. Then the whole gang jumped on the three fellers. They had this over and over again. Every time they kicked the ball the spectators yelled. Every time they kicked each other the spectators yelled the harder. I think they kept it up for two hours, and then an undertaker came."

"But what for?"

"He was going to say he'd bury the dead for so much, but they run him off, and a policeman arrested me for being, and an auto busted her tires, and ten women fainted away, and I've never been able to figure out what sort of a game it was."
