WANTED—Apples, apple butter and dried apples—C. P. Long store, Spring Mills.

The Daddies.

"The Daddies" is a subordinate order of the great Independent Order of Bachelors. At the foot of Old Tussey, on the south side of Potter township, at the home of George Jordan, the body met at the banquet table, (believing as they do that every organization should assemble at the festive board at least once a year.) Thursday evening of last week.

Laws, as unchangeable as those of the Medes and Persians, were passed, and will be rigidly enforced. A few of the rules that the public may know are these:

No member is permitted to "histe" boozes to the extent of becoming a professional in the art; no member is allowed to escort an old maid who is addicted to the use of powder and paint—the penalty being dismissal, with no appeal.

But the banquet! It was a grand success. Thirty-nine were present, and the Potters Mills orchestra furnished the music. There were several recitations and addresses. "Eating Pie in the Air" was the subject elucidated by W. Mulbarger, and further expounded by F. McCoy. Several speakers from a distance had been invited, but they were not present.

At a business session leather medals were awarded Muck & Keiffer for the gastronomic feats of having devoured two ten cent boxes of digestive tablets. Three new members were let into mysteries of the order, the master of ceremonies being Dr. Kohler. The members were F. McCoy, J. Armstrong and J. Auman.

Charges were preferred against two members. The first charge was, buying intoxicating liquors; second, selling talcum powder to old maids.

The old maids were all invited, but none appeared. The rank and file of the order hopes the aged maidens will return the compliment when they hold their banquet, and they will be assured that good will be returned for evil.

Space will not permit giving the names of those present and absent, the majority of the latter being from Potter's Mills.

Any one wishing to join the order should communicate with the secretary, who will notify Dr. Kohler, president, who will call to see you and explain its workings. xxx.

Millin County Dry.

Millin county will be dry for another year. License court was held on Monday, and after petitions and arguments on both sides had been presented, Judge Woods announced that all licenses were refused. Associate Judge Swyers voted for license to all applicants.

About nine thousand persons signed remonstrances in some shape or form, that number being about twice as many as signed against license last year.

The hotel keepers all claimed they were doing a losing business without license, but this plea did not seem to take with the court. There was no attempt made to show that hotels were improperly conducted, nor that the landlords were fit or unfit persons to be licensed under the law. It appears the court was guided by the wishes of the people, the great majority of whom are opposed to the liquor traffic.

The St. Charles, Coleman, National, Miller, Valley, and Central hotels in Lewistown have closed their doors to the public.

Hotels that are conducted for the sole reason that it carries with them the privilege to sell intoxicants have no moral right to exist. The closing of these hotels shows plainly what they were in business for.
