Farmer-George E. Heckman, on the Harper farm east of Centre Hall, is credited with having marketed the finest load of potatoes that were purchased by the Howard Creamery Corporation in any of the shipments of the five or six cars of tubers sent out by that firm.

Warren S. Krise, of Johnstown, came to Centre Hall the latter part of last week to remain for a few days. He is engaged in the real estate business, fire insurance, and is a partner in a large printing establishment, as well as agent for the Florida Land Association. Mr. Krise is interested in politics, being the Democratic candidate for the legislature from Johnstown. He returned home Tuesday, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Lois. His youngest daughter, Miss Ruth remained in Centre Hall to attend the Centre Hall High School.

The meetings held in the orchards of Benjamin Lambert, in Brush Valley, and Col. Reynolds, at Bellefonte, though not largely attended, were of considerable importance in demonstrating the good results from using the modern methods of caring for orchards. The meetings were conducted by C. T. Foster and R. P. Allaman, both of whom represent the State Agricultural Department. The samples of apples taken from the orchard of H. H. Laub, at Beaver Springs, and also from orchards in Union county, were closely inspected, and gave an opportunity to become acquainted with varieties planted but had not yet fruited.

Rev. Daniel Gress, chairman of the supply committee of the Boalsburg Reformed church, which is still vacant, will hold Harvest Home services in Pine Grove Mills, next Sunday morning and in the Pine Hall Reformed church in the afternoon.

Harvest Home services in the Reformed church on Sunday were well attended. The sermon by Rev. A. M. Schmidt, of Bellefonte, was both interesting and instructive. The church was appropriately decorated with bouquets of flowers, ferns and potted plants; the altar was trimmed with autumn leaves and laden with fruit, corn and vegetables.

In childhood and in old age one needs the care of others, for in both stages of life one is absolutely dependent, and fortunate is he or she who in childhood has the tender care of a mother, and possibly more fortunate is the tottering aged to have a son, or a daughter or friend to assume responsibility during the last years of life. In this respect Mrs. Sarah Rankin, of Boalsburg, and Mrs. Jane Irvin, of Oak Hall Station, are well provided for, and both the sisters are leaving the dear old homes, with all its dearest associations, to live with their daughters, because age has overtaken. Mrs. Rankin sold her Boalsburg home and household effects, and Monday accompanied her daughter, Mrs. E. P. McIntire, to her Altoona home. Mrs. Irvin will dispose of the greater part of her personal belongings, and in a short time go to Washington, this state, to live with her daughter, Mrs. Annie Mitchell. She lived at the Irvin home during all of her married life, and Mrs. Rankin lived in Boalsburg for almost forty years, so it will be sure that their leaving will be parting with many old-time friends. A brother, Calvin Riley, who lived with Mrs. Rankin, has taken rooms at Oak Hall Station, and will hereafter live there.

KEYSTONERS FORCING
EISENBROWN OFF TICKET

His Fidelity to Principles of Democracy Offensive to the Party Wreckers.

Efforts to induce ex-Magistrate William Eisenbrown to withdraw as the William Penn Party nominee against State Senator Ernest L. Tustin for the latter's seat in Harrisburg, are being made by a faction of the Keystone Party, angered by Mr. Eisenbrown's coming out, at the recent meeting of the Democratic club, of Walnut street, near Broad, in ardent support of Senator Webster Grim as the Democratic nominee for governor.

When Mr. Eisenbrown heard of this he said that he certainly would not withdraw, as he had entered the running in good faith, to gratify many friends who had pressed the nomination upon him.

To the Democratic club Mr. Eisenbrown had said, as he repeats, that although he was independent in local politics, he was always a Democrat in national affairs. "It is only right that Democrats should be loyal to Senator Grim," he said, "as that candidate for governor, during eight years in the state senate, fought the good fight, was always on the firing line and never flinched from his duty to the people. To those who told him of the Keystone move to crowd him out of the ticket for the senate, he said, 'I have not been asked to withdraw,' he added, 'and it is my purpose to make the fight for the senate seat.'"

It is supposed that the Eisenbrown stand for Grim against the gubernatorial candidate of the Keystone party will strengthen the ex-magistrate among the Democrats. Eisenbrown has stirred up a split in the independent organization, which goes alternately by the name of the William Penn and the Keystone party, although the organizations of the two parties in West Philadelphia are not entirely identical.

The Keystone county committee, prior to the declaration for Grim by Eisenbrown adopted a resolution placing all the genuine Penn nominees for the state legislature, including Eisenbrown, on the Keystone party ticket.

President Taft has been only in office eighteen months, and already he has been the subject of a great deal of speculation as to his fate. It is believed that he will be succeeded by Woodrow Wilson, the champion of the people against the plutocrats, and hold almost unlimited power through the mandate of the masses.

Similarly did Julius Caesar, another many-sided man, plot out his career in Gaul, walking at the head of his legions under the rain, swimming his rivers or riding on horseback among the litters in which his secretaries were borne, and dictating four or six letters at a time; agitating Rome from the remotest part of Belgium; even as American politicians on a basis of factions speculated on what Roosevelt was pondering in Africa.

Placating the Insurgents.
[From the New York Times.]
To say that the letter of President Taft's secretary to an unnamed "regular" Republican is ill-judged would be to pass it by with too little censure. It is a bad letter, and ought never to have been written. The things of which it treats, if done, should not be talked about, but they ought never to have been done at all. It is humiliating for the people of the country to hear their president confess that he withheld patronage from insurgent Republican senators and representatives because they opposed legislative measures he favored, and that now, having encountered a popular defeat in pursuing that policy he resolves to apportion appointments without discrimination between the regulars and the insurgents. It is something more than humiliating to hear this avowal of such a gross misuse of the appointing power; it seems to take us back to the old days when the practices incident to the spoils system were unconcealed and unrebuked.

It is not in law or in morals, permitted to the president of the United States to seek to influence legislation through the power of appointment.

The Republicans are greatly distressed over the small registration in Philadelphia, and they have reason to be. The Democrats in the city have been unusually alert and the independents active, yet the registration is 100,000 short of the normal. Of course that means a vast falling off of the legitimate Republican vote, and as the opposition to the machine in all parties intend to watch the vote closely the opportunity for repeating and impersonating will be materially cut down. The chances are, therefore, that the Republican majority in the state will be, comparatively speaking, meager and the reform wave from the state will overwhelm it.

Foolishly Working Overtime.
[From the Washington Post.]
Republicans seem awfully busy trying to make out that Maine isn't much of a political ground hog, anyhow.

"TO-MORROW"
"To-morrow," said the languid man,
'I'll have my life insured, I guess;
I know it is the safest plan
To save my children from distress."
And when the morrow came around,
They placed him gently in a box;
At the break of morning he was found
As dead as Julius Caesar's ox.
His widow now is scrubbing floors,
And washing shirts and splitting wood,
And doing fifty other chores
That she may rear her wailing brood.

"To-morrow," said the careless jay,
'I'll take an hour and make my will;
And then if I should pass away,
The wife and kids will know no ill."
The morrow came serene and nice,
The weather mild with signs of rain;
The careless jay was placed on ice,
Embalming fluid in his brain.
Alas, alas, poor careless jay!
The lawyers got his pile of cash;
His wife is toiling night and day
To keep the kids in clothes and bread.

TO-MORROW is the ambushed walk
Avoided by the circumspect.
To-morrow is the fatal rock
On which a million ships are wrecked.
