Last week the Reporter was obliged to come under the Postoffice ruling which forbids papers to be sent through the mails as second class matter to all subscribers who were in arrears twelve months and over. To comply with this new ruling, it became necessary to withhold a number of Reports heretofore sent subscribers, and instead a card was mailed notifying each one of the reason why the paper could not be mailed as heretofore. Since a number of our patrons have forwarded cash, checks and post-office money orders and again renewed their subscription. These will please accept the thanks of the publisher.

There is trouble in this senatorial district among the Republicans. One named Frederick R. Schofield, of DuBois, filed nomination papers that will put his name on the ballot to be voted in November under the "Independent Party," whatever that means. Of course, this action of Mr. Schofield, who was a candidate at the regular primaries, lessens the chances of Joseph Alexander, the regular Republican nominee for the office of state senator, in this district, and in proportion to the loss to Mr. Alexander, Dr. Stewart the regular Democratic nominee, will be the gainer. There is one thing sure, Dr. Stewart is altogether capable of filling the important office, and this will insure the district to be represented by both a capable and honest Democrat. His vote will be needed in the next house, as will that of many other Democratic candidates, if the state is not to be run in a high handed way.

If the home merchant would use the same methods to secure trade as does the mail order house, the latter would go to the wall in a very short time. About the only advertising many home merchants get is the encouragement given in the local newspapers to their customers to buy at home. If the local newspapers would devote as much of their space to boosting the mail order house as it does to advocating home buying, every mail order house would profit largely. For all this free advertising received by the local merchants the newspaper man receives nothing. In many instances the merchant does not only fail to advertise, but uses "stock food" bill heads, government envelopes, and rubber stamps, and at the same time he would want to way lay the newspaper man if he were to call attention to an advertisement of a mail order house and say that he believed the home consumer could save money by buying from it.

PUBLISHERS MEET

In Bellefonte on Monday and Discuss Questions of Public Interest.

The Newspaper Publishers' Association of Centre County held a meeting Monday morning, and while in session discussed the recent ruling of the Post Office Department in regard to mailing papers to subscribers who are in arrears more than twelve months. The conclusion of their discussions is set forth in the following:

WHEREAS, The United States Post Office Department, at Washington, D. C., has positively prohibited the mailing of weekly newspapers to subscribers more than twelve months in arrears, at the second class rate; and

WHEREAS, Violation of this order of the Post Office Department means that every offending newspaper will be denied the use of the United States mails; and

WHEREAS, This regulation of the Post Office Department has now forced every newspaper in Centre county to remove from its list a large number of delinquent subscribers, many of whom owe subscriptions to several of the newspapers of Centre county, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Newspaper Publishers' Association of Centre County compile a list showing the names of persons owing subscriptions to newspapers in the county, and the number of newspapers in the county to which they are indebted, and a copy of this list be furnished to each newspaper for its protection; and be it further

RESOLVED, That any person whose name is on this list of delinquent subscribers and shall pay his or her indebtedness to such newspaper or newspapers, be guaranteed that such payment will be promptly reported to the Newspaper Publishers' Association of Centre County and that the name in question immediately removed from said delinquent list.

Linden Hall 2—Automobiles.

Within a week two brand-new Ford automobiles, 1911 style, will find their way to Linden Hall, the same having been purchased by F. E. Wieland and Mrs. J. W. Keller, both merchants in the village named. The sale was made by C. H. Breen, of Millheim, who in company with S. Ward Granley, of the Millheim Banking Company; J. D. Nieman, the Millheim clothier; and T. M. Granley, of the Spring Mills Creamery Company, made a trip there on Monday, stopping at Centre Hall on their return in the evening.

LANDLORD WILL HAVE TO PAY

One Thousand Dollars for Selling Liquor to Intoxicated Man.

In the Lycoming county court Thursday the jury in the case of Joseph G. Fredericks brought in a verdict of $1,000 damages in favor of Mrs. Rosa L. Bower and her minor children.

Fredericks is a hotel keeper in Antea Gap and was charged with selling liquor to Adam N. Bower who, while intoxicated, fell from his wagon and was slowly ground to death against a wheel of that vehicle. An account of this incident was printed in these columns at the time the accident occurred, and will be recalled by many of the readers.

DOUBLE SUNSET.

Curious Spectacle Seen at Times in One Spot in England.

A very curious astronomical phenomenon occurs in the heavens at a certain time of the year which can be witnessed only by standing in the parish churchyard of Leek, in Staffordshire, England.

From that position the top of a mountain known as the Cloud breaks the line of sight and fully intercepts your view of the setting of the sun. This mountain is six miles distant, as the crow flies, from the town of Leek and owing to its peculiar formation causes the sun when it has entered that sign of the zodiac known as Cancer, which happens when we are about halfway through the year, to produce the strange effect of setting twice daily.

The first time that it sets the town sinks into darkness, and the inhabitants light up their houses and shops in the usual way. Presently dawn suffuses over the town, clear daylight follows, and artificial lights are put out.

At the second setting of the sun darkness sets in for good. This phenomenon continues for some days.

The head and shoulders of the distant mountain intervene just at the juncture when the sun at the first setting drops behind the top or head of the mountain. There he hides for some time and emerges again from behind just below the head and throws daylight out upon the locality once more, when he again sinks behind the mountain's shoulders and finally sets behind the horizon.—Stray Stories.

KNOCKED FOR RAIN.

And Within an Hour the Wind Veered and the Shower Came.

Frances Gostling, author of "The Britons at Home," has this curious tale of the dolmen of Rocamad, with its curious cup shaped impressions like the constellation Pleiades: An old woman, a bystander, was asked what the marks were for. "Folks say," said she, "that they were made by the elbows and knees of St. Rock. He fell down on this stone when he landed from Ireland." And then the old woman added: "We use the holes now when we want the wind to change. We knock in them." The story continues: "Do ask her to knock." I cried eagerly. There was a moment of hesitation on the part of the old woman, a half frown shown in a careless way, and "What wind would usdam like to have?" "Southwest," said I, looking at the cloudless sky.

"The old woman took up a flint and went slowly to the dolmen. Without any pause for reflection she knocked three times in a particular depression, murmuring some words I should not have understood even had they been audible. 'Come,' observed my friend; 'we have yet time to see the rest of the peninsula.'"

"The old woman said something, at which M. le Rouzic laughed. 'She says that if we are going farther it will be best to be quick,' said he. 'Why?' 'The rain you asked for will be here shortly.' And in less than an hour it was raining."

Early Earrings.

The earring is not a modern invention, for more than twenty centuries ago the daughter of Aristotle wore golden hoops. The philosopher's daughter's earrings were found in her tomb near Chalcis in Euboea, by exploring archaeologists, and certainly modern workmanship cannot produce their equal. In each golden hoop swung a tiny dove, with precious stones for eyes and bands of minute gems to give the color of the iridescent breast and wings. The feathers were of granulated gold, and the tail feathers were so minutely wrought and adjusted that they acted like a balance, as in a living bird, so that the exquisite miniature creatures whenever the wearer moved or laughed or tossed her head, would move and balance themselves upon their pendent perches.

Colors in Poetry.

As to color, Grant Allen maintained in an "Essay on the Color Sense" that only eight colors are recognized by the popular mind—black, white, red, blue, green, yellow, gray and brown. Educated people speak of scarlet, crimson, lilac and purple only under exceptional circumstances. In a prosaic hour Grant Allen went through "Poems and Ballads" on the quest for color and found that Swinburne used the word red 151 times, rose and crimson once each and sanguine, ruddy and scarlet twice each. Gold is mentioned thirteen times. Blue reaches twenty-five. And the prosaic conclusion is "to adopt the statistical form, we might say, if we chose to reckon the queer double that red is 500 per cent more poetical than blue."

Her Strong Faith.

"Oh, Tom," explained the fate young maid as their auto flew about "there's a church just ahead there."
"But," replied the shaping lover, "we can't be married there."
"Yet, but we might stop there and pray that we may not be overtaken."—Euse Remus' Magazine.
