

GRADUATION EXERCISES

The subjects were admirably handled by youthful graduates, the subject matter in each being inspiring. There was some display of oratory on the part of the first speaker, Calvin Smith, and good, plain speaking by Roy Puff, whose matter demanded it. His matter bears the mark of originality and reflects great credit.

That this is an age of thought was well developed by Nina Snyder.

"What Spare Moments Will Accomplish" was a most appropriate subject selected by Nellie Smith, for it was by the use of these moments that her studies were pursued during the past two years. Young in years, yet burdened with household duties owing to the illness of her mother, she kept pace with her class and on the rostrum outclassed them. With her it was a true exhibition of what spare moments will accomplish, if not given to sweeping the streets.

After the exercises were over a light lunch was served to the members of the class, their parents, members of the school board, and a few others.

Another Murder in Centre.

Sunday evening, at about seven o'clock, Carman Ventro, an Italian, better known as Tony John, murdered Dominick Giancippio, another Italian. The crime was committed near the Chemical lime kilns, about two miles from Bellefonte, and was the result of a drunken brawl, although it is said that a feeling of enmity of long standing had existed between the two men. Death was caused by the severing of the jugular vein with some sharp instrument, probably a razor or stiletto, in the hands of the murderer, who escaped to the mountains.

Since the perpetration of the crime the sheriff, deputy sheriff and others have been scouring the mountains in the vicinity of the place where the murder was committed, but as yet no trace of Ventro has been found. A strict watch is being kept on all freight trains entering Tyrone, Look Haven, Williamsport and other places with the hope of capturing the murderer and bringing him to justice.

Appropriations for Hospitals.

The appropriations for hospitals, etc., have been reported to the house. In many instances the sums are less than in former years, the appropriations being kept within the limits of the revenue. The sums apportioned the several hospitals in the central part of Pennsylvania are as follows:

Bellefonte hospital.....	$15,000
Lewistown hospital.....	20,000
Lock Haven hospital.....	20,000

Court House Dedication.

The new court house will be dedicated Friday with appropriate ceremonies. Supreme court judges and judges of the lower court have been invited, and will speak on the occasion. The program committee was not able to give any names of speakers when this issue went to press.
