Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of the House, and Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, will speak in Harrisburg, Thursday, 15th inst., at the first convention of the Federation of Clubs.

Miss Helen Hoy Atherton, daughter of the late George W. Atherton, who was president of Pennsylvania State College for a number of years, and Prof. C. E. Govier, an instructor at that institution, were recently married by Rev. John Hewitt, at Bellefonte. They will make their home at State College.

George Beezer, the Bellefonte livery man, had a narrow escape one day last week. On passing over the Pennsy tracks his machine balked, just when a Bald Eagle passenger train wanted to use the crossing. The engine was reversed and the emergency brake put into play, stopping the train in time to avert a collision.

The Northern Conference of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Lutheran Synod of Central Pennsylvania is in session at Tusseyville as the Reporter goes to press. Chief among the speakers on Wednesday was Miss Mary E. Lowe, Missionary, Guntur, India. The sessions were largely attended by delegates and others having the missionary spirit.

Miss Jodie Rearick, the eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Rearick, of Salona, came to Centre Hall on Saturday, and for several days was the guest of Miss Margaret Jacobs. She is a graduate from the Lock Haven State Normal, and last year taught school in Elk county. The Rearick family will move to Williamsburg the latter part of this month, Rev. Rearick having accepted a call to a Lutheran pastorate there.

In a sermon recently in the Grace Methodist church, Chicago, Rev. Elmer Williams made reference to the great wickedness in that city in the present day. The sermon attracted wide attention, the Chicago Inter Ocean giving over two columns of comment on the discourse. Rev. Williams is a brother of the present commissioner's clerk, and the husband of Miss Kerr, formerly of Centre Hall. He is pastor of one of the leading Methodist congregations in Chicago.

Mrs. George Emerick and daughter, Miss Verna, of Centre Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harper, of Bellefonte, the former a brother to Mrs. Emerick, on Sunday morning left Bellefonte for points in Ohio. One of the professors in that institution is their son, Arthur Harper, who will accompany his parents home. Before returning home they will spend some time among relatives in Pittsburg.

Mr. Streamer, a member of the Junior class of the theological seminary at Selinsgrove, filled the appointments of Rev. B. F. Bleber, Sunday, at Centre Hall, George Valley and Union. It was somewhat of a surprise to the members of the congregations to see the stranger in the pulpit, but his discourses proved him an exceptionally well qualified student. He is a very ready speaker, and left a very good impression on his hearers as to his ability, and also left with his hearers an abundance of good thought, and a better insight of the true church of God. He spoke of the church at Corinth, but his applications were also to the church as it is today. Mr. Streamer, with his family, live at Selinsgrove, his former home having been at Philipsburg, where for a time he took charge of a deceased brother's business.

Igen-Larson.

The marriage of Wallace Igen, of near Centre Hall, and Miss Lena Larson, of Duluth, Minnesota, took place at the Reformed parsonage, in Bellefonte, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. M. Schmidt.

There is a bit of romance connected with this marriage. Mr. Igen met the young lady in Tampa, Florida, a few years ago, but since they had been parted until Monday when Miss Larson came to Bellefonte, where she was met by the prospective groom. In the afternoon the couple came to Centre Hall, and from here went to the Igen farm, formerly the McMurray farm, east of Centre Hall. On Tuesday they again returned to Bellefonte, procured a marriage license and were married, returning the same day to their new home.

The couple have the Reporter's best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous life.

The Patrons Rural Telephone Company held an adjourned meeting at the Garman House, in Bellefonte, last Saturday afternoon, to make distribution of the commission earned for collecting during 1910. Two hundred and thirty dollars were paid out on this account, the two companies receiving the largest amount, or about thirty-five dollars each, was the Brush Valley Company and the Centre Hall-Linden Hall Company. While H. W. Orwig, of Millinburg, was driving up Penns valley in his new Franklin automobile, he attempted to pass Jacob Zong, who with his son, Glenn, was driving along the road in a buggy, near Linden Hall. The Pennsylvania Railroad company is constructing concrete bridges on its branch roads, the last one to be constructed on the L. & T. being on this side of Linden Hall over Logan Branch. The bridge is moulded close by its final resting place and is then swung into position in sections by the use of a large crane. A great deal of machinery is employed in the construction, and the operators of these as well as the men who labor otherwise, tent on the spot during the construction period.

An Unreasonable Friend.

Several young artists in Philadelphia are telling a story on another wielder of the brush who is a fellow member in a little club. One of the rules of the club is that each member must keep his finished paintings up to a certain number. The artist on whom the story is told is noted for his indolence. He keeps up to the requirement regarding the number, but never exceeds it. But for his distaste for work the artist probably would be very comfortably fixed financially, as he has considerable talent. As a matter of fact, he is usually on the edge of penury. Several days ago, when his exchequer was unusually low, a friend visited him in his studio. The friend looked at several of the paintings, while the artist lay on a couch, smoking a pipe. "I like this," the friend finally said, pointing to one of them. He named a good price which he was willing to pay. The artist looked at him mournfully. "Aw, don't do that," he said. "I've got to sell it to paint another."—Philadelphia Times.

Ancient Bridge Superstition.

A primitive notion existed among the Romans and other races that a bridge was an offense and injury to the river god, as it saved people from being drowned while fording or swimming across and robbed the deity of a certain number of victims which were his due. For many centuries in Rome propitiatory offerings of human victims were made every year to the Tiber. Men and women were drowned by being bound and flung from the wooden Sublician bridge, which, till nearly the end of the republican period, was the one and only bridge across the Tiber in Rome.

Strategy.

The turkey was not a very large one and Mrs. Pedagog's boarders began to be a little anxious on the subject of its going around. Finally the last bit was distributed, and the idiot, glancing at his portion, observed that he had drawn the neck and the pope's nose. "Ah, Mrs. Pedagog," said he, with a genial smile, "you are a wonder at making both ends meet."—Lippincott's

What Some of Them Did Before They Took to Writing.

Among those novelists who studied law we have Fielding, Scott, Charles Reade, Wilkie Collins, Blackmore, Washington Irving, George Meredith, Robert Grant, Henry James, Anthony Hope, Rider Haggard and Owen Wister. Journalism, which Mr. Kipling once defined as the one legitimate branch of the profession, is represented by Dickens, David Christie Murray, William Black, J. M. Barrie, Marlon Crawford, George W. Cable, Stephen Crane, George Barr McCutcheon, Frank Norris, Richard Harding Davis and David Graham Phillips. The navy and merchant marine have given us Smollet, Captain Marryat, Fenimore Cooper, Clark Russell, Joseph Conrad and Morgan Robertson. Artists and architects include Thackeray, Du Maurier, Hopkinson Smith, Robert Chambers, Thomas Hardy and William J. Locke. Medicine and theology are not so well represented. Under the former head we recall for the moment only Smollet (naval surgeon), Holmes, S. Weir Mitchell and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; under the latter, Sterne, Charles Kingsley, Henry van Dyke, Edward Everett Hale, Ian Maclaren, Ralph Connor and Thomas Dixon. College professors who have either given up their chairs to become novelists or have found time for occasional novels in the midst of their other duties are Sir Walter Besant, Robert Herrick and Brander Matthews—Bookman.

Seven hundred years ago some snepherds of the valley of Roncal, in Navarre, were murdered by shepherds of the valley of Bareton, in Bearn, the crime taking place on the high pasture lands of Arlas, in the Pyrenees. It would have been difficult to bring the murderers individually to justice, and the Spaniards were preparing to make war upon the valley from which the French murderers had come when the French villages proposed that peace be maintained at the price of a yearly tax or tribute, to endure for all time, and this proposition was accepted.

The payment of this blood tax—originally three white mares, but later three cows of a particular breed and color—has been made ever since, the custom (it is nothing more) having survived even the great wars in which both France and Spain have engaged and the storm of the French revolution.

Yearly the representative men of the two valleys meet on the frontier at a certain stone remote from any town and go through the ceremony of presenting and receiving the cattle. The order of procedure, which is elaborate and impressive, is fixed by a document bearing the date 1375, though the tax was paid a hundred years prior to that time. The records of each yearly meeting and payment are duly attested and deposited in the archives of the Roncalais.—New York Tribune.
