High class draft horses are being purchased by George E. Homan, of Millheim, for a Maryland party, the shipments being made to Frostburg. The heavy draft horse is always in demand, and this should induce the farmers who breed horses as a side issue to give the heavy type more attention.

During the latter part of June the consistory of the Centre Hall Reformed church issued a call to Rev. Charles F. Freeman, of Summit Hill, Carbon county, to become the pastor on the charge. In the meantime the officials of the congregation Rev. Freeman is serving increased his salary, and this together with other reasons were responsible for his refusal to accept the call tendered.

But three permanent teachers certificates were issued in Centre county as the result of examinations conducted by the committee appointed by State Superintendent Schaeffer. Those granted the privilege to teach without further examination in the future are: Ellen Johnston, of Blanchard; Walter Williams, of Port Matilda; and S. M. Robb, of Milesburg.

Either the information gained at experiment stations in the several states is faulty or else a large number of farmers postpone the cutting of grasses too long to secure the best hay from the points of weight and nutriment. The experiment stations recommend cutting early, while the stalks are in full vigor, yet a large percentage of timothy in this locality is permitted to decline before it is cut. Evidently the farmer is losing by not accepting the advice of those who have made the question a study.
