SLUDGE HAMMER FOR LOCK JAW.

Rather Crude Remedy, but Favorable Results are Instantaneous.

To use a sledge hammer as a remedy for lock jaw in this enlightened and progressive age is in deed singular but since the results have been favorable the Reporter will give its readers the facts in the case.

About two miles south of Centre Hall lives William H. Baird. He had a fine colt, two years old, and shortly after being castrated, the animal took sick, due do doubt to the operation. Mr. Baird called in a veterinary surgeon and treatment was begun, but the animal grew worse, went down and lock-jaw set in. Mr. Baird had fully determined to kill the colt to put it out of misery, but he was prevailed upon by a neighbor who happened to come to the Baird barn to call up Dr. Philip Frank, the local veterinary surgeon, and give him a chance on the case. Mr. Baird acted on the suggestion. Dr. Frank found the colt lying in the stable, legs extended and stiff, jaws open and eyes set. As a last resort the sledge hammer treatment was decided upon, and the sledge hammer treatment is this: A plank was held over the forehead of the brute and this was struck a heavy blow with the hammer. There was immediate response to the treatment. The jaws were released, and the muscles in the limbs relaxed. In less than an hour, the colt was on its feet after lying for several days and began eating hay. For the first hour the eyes occasionally showed all "white," but later the muscles held the orbs in their natural position.

This treatment described was followed with medicine, and now, almost a month later, the colt is all right, and no ill effects of its sickness is noticeable, and all due to Dr. Frank's radical treatment.

Wood House sold.
The Spring Mills hotel, popularly known as the Wood House, so named after its present landlord, Warren Wood, was sold by Mrs. David Ruhl to Moses C. Stover, of Farmers Mills. The sum paid for the hostelry is said to have been $2500, and this guess is likely correct. Mr. Stover will take charge of the hotel himself, next spring.

Progressive Farmers in nearly all localities
are building their farm improvements of cement
They are investing their money in permanent buildings instead of spending it in repairs. Concrete is the ideal building material on the farm as well as in the towns. Concrete sidewalks, troughs, fences, foundations, floors, porches, steps, stable floors, pig pens, chicken houses and corn cribs are rapidly displacing those made of other materials.
