As soon as the state comes into possession of the land, it is given out that a number of prisoners will at once be quartered in the farm houses, and their services drafted on to aid in performing whatever work they will be able to do.

Candle Making In China.

China is no new thing. Years before the advent of the foreigner the natives made them by crude methods and used them in home and temple.

Even today millions of candles are made by the old process of dipping, at which the old Chinese are very expert. A mixture of tallow and castor oil is first prepared and the operator, placing a straw to serve as a wick between each of his ten fingers, dips them into the preparation as many times as necessary to give the candles the desired thickness. After this they are set up on end against a board to harden and the straw wicks clipped to a proper length. The finished product burns well, gives a fair light, is consumed slowly, and, best of all, in native eyes, is very cheap. These candles are usually made by small factories for sale to storekeepers, but
